Morning Oregonian.

VOL. XXIII. PORTLAND, OREGON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 1[illegible], 188[illegible]. NO. 12[illegible]

GENERAL NEWS.

Again the northwest is deprived of telegraph news. This time the wires are either down or interfered with south of Red Bluff. No dispatches have been received since early yesterday morning.

Gigantic Oregon and Boston Enterprise.

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—The Boston Herald, in its financial article, says Boston capital has done as much, not more, than any other in building up and developing the far west, and in addition to previous ventures now some in Oregon and Boston enterprise, controlled in this city. The nominal capital is $4,000,000, in $100 shares. Several hundred thousand dollars have already been subscribed in New England at 50 for the bonds, and a stock bonus of the same amount of par. The objects of the corporation are to purchase, improve and sell real estate property in Oregon, California, Washington and Idaho territories, and British Columbia; to construct and maintain dry docks, elevators, depot buildings, factories, dwelling houses, highways and railroads, and to do a general steamboat, railroad and commercial business. Its railroads are in part defined by the building of a road from Coos bay to the eastern boundary of Oregon, by way of Roseburg. Should that road be built, it is not improbable it would connect with the Union Pacific. The Oregon Short Line Company will give its earliest attention to the Coos bay region, particularly to the vast forests of white cedar. Then it will also develop the coal mines on the property which it controls. Parties identified with this undertaking are well known capitalists, whose names it is not desired to publish.

Great Increase of Duties.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—It is stated at the treasury department that by reason of the vigorous action of the government in prosecuting opium smugglers on the Pacific coast, the duties collected at San Francisco on opium during the last fiscal year were more than $1,300,000 in excess of the collections of the past for the previous year.

In Good Spirits.

NEW YORK, Aug 15.—Government securities are firm, and brokers are in excellent spirits over the situation.

THE OUTLOOK FOR CROPS.

August Report of the Department of Agriculture.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1[illegible].—The August cotton returns to the department of agriculture are less favorable than were those of July. The condition is lower in every state except two. On the northern border of the belt, in Virginia and Tennessee, the plant is suffering from meteorological vagaries. This has been a peculiar season. It was too cold in May, too wet in June and too dry in July. The condition of cotton compared with the returns of former years, is unpromising. The volume of the crop depends largely on the most critical period from August to October.

Corn—There has been an improvement in the appearance of the corn fields during the month of July in New England, the middle states, the Ohio valley and west of the Mississippi, in Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, though it is slight, being [illegible] by a single point. It has retrograded in the south in consequence of the drought, and there has been some decline in Michigan from too much moisture. Taking the whole area together, the condition has advanced from 88 to 89 per cent. of a perfect crop. The condition of the corn crop in August, 1879, was 90 per cent., and the yield twenty-eight bushels per acre. The present returns indicate a yield of not much over twenty-five bushels per acre, or [illegible] bushels, which is as much as was produced in 1879. The condition is six points higher than last year in August and lower than in August from 1877 to 1880 inclusive. The nights have been too cool for rapid development, and the crop is late, and fears are expressed that frost may yet cause damage. In August, 1873, the condition was one point higher than the present average. The averages of principal states are as follows: Illinois, [illegible]; Ohio, [illegible]; Kentucky, 97; Kansas, [illegible]; Nebraska, [illegible]; Indiana, [illegible]; Michigan, 80; Missouri, 89; Iowa, 80; Wisconsin, [illegible]; New York, 90; New Jersey, [illegible]; Pennsylvania, 99; Virginia, 93; North Carolina, [illegible]; South Carolina, [illegible]; Georgia, 74; Alabama, 80; Mississippi, [illegible]; Louisiana, 104; Texas, 93; Arkansas, 97; Tennessee, [illegible].

Spring wheat—The acreage condition of spring wheat for August 1 is 97, the same as in 1882, but higher than any previous August since 1877. In Wisconsin recent rains have injured the crop in the southern and southwestern counties an average of 9 points. The prospect in Minnesota favors a crop of 13½ bushels per acre, notwithstanding the bad weather in the early spring and the subsequent drought. In the northern counties the condition is [illegible]. The fears excited by excessive heat early in July in northern Dakota have been happily dispelled. Cass and Richland counties promise a better yield than last year. The other counties will scarcely equal their last record. In southern Dakota the harvest is progressing. The straw is bright, the heads large and the yield better than last year. The returns of August do not essentially change the indicated aggregate of July for the entire crop. The result of the harvest will be more fully reported on the return of the thresher's blanks. It is now certain a shortage exists which will require all the surplus of last year and keep prices well sustained. A cable dispatch received from the London Statistical Department says the weather was beneficial for the first three days of August and the temperature low for this time of the year. The wheat market is advancing and stocks are large. The quality of the new crop is fair. The general prospects of last month's dispatches are confirmed, counting on a decrease of acreage. The total output of European wheat is one-fifth less than last year and one-tenth below the average. German, French and Russian advices are worse.

Oats—The condition is represented by 91.5, a figure unsurpassed only by last August since 1878. North of the parallel of 40 deg. the high condition is almost universal. In some of the western districts there has been injury from lodging, the result of storms.

Barley—The condition average is [illegible], the same as in August, 1882, but higher than in any previous year since 1874. The average for New York is [illegible], Pennsylvania 97, Ohio [illegible], Michigan [illegible], Wisconsin 96, Minnesota 96, Iowa [illegible], Nebraska 102, California [illegible]. These states produce more than two-thirds of the crop.

Potatoes—Returns indicate a full development of potatoes. The crop condition is 104.1. The promise is better in the central states of the west than on the northern border where the soil has been saturated with moisture.

Buckwheat—The condition of buckwheat is equal to that of last year, and is represented by [illegible].

Tobacco—The average condition is [illegible]. Kentucky [illegible], Tennessee [illegible], Virginia 74, North Carolina 70, Ohio [illegible], Pennsylvania 96, Connecticut 81.

CHINESE IN GOTHAM.

The Mongolians Propose to Organize Protective Associations.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Chinatown has been discussing, with various opinions, during the last week, the organization of Chinese protective associations among the New York Chinamen. Ah Fung Wing Chin, the consul who is directing the project, is assailed in most cases by Chinese by those unfavorable to it. "There are already three local associations of the kind—Ha Ka Hing, the Ha Ka Wong Sing, and the Hong Soth Sing," said a Chinese [illegible], in broken English, "and these might better be united, than add still more to the number." Another Chinaman who expressed himself intelligently, thought the consul imagined himself still in China, and desirous, as the emperor's representative, of wielding arbitrary power so far as he could. Many of the ignorant Chinese would believe that he had this right, and he could levy taxes on them after the custom at home. Said this man:

"There were a number of wealthy Chinamen in New York. I know four in Mott street, who represent $[illegible],000, and one of them has not less than $[illegible],000. It is all in real estate. The consul knows what money there is here. One of these wealthy Chinamen goes to China every year or two, but always keeps his investments here, and the laundrymen are employed at $[illegible] a day and board, and will no work [illegible]. Some of them, I know, often make $5 a day. Now, if the consul gets them in his association, and makes them pay $[illegible] each, or if their means permit as high as 300, then he can levy on them as he pleases when he wants money."

The Chinese consul rents the house at No. 25 Clinton place. Its interior is fitted up after the Chinese fashion, with Chinese pictures on the walls. The members of the suite are all dressed after what may be considered the latest Peking models, with the exception of the interpreter, who wears the European costume. One of the attaches might well pass for a Peking dude. His dress is of a sky-blue tint, with brilliant ribbons. His hair is elaborately braided, a broad band of ribbons passing over his head, which is daintily fringed with a row of hair an inch long, standing upright.

The Growth of Minneapolis.

New York Tribune.

But if Winnipeg has boomed its boom this city of Minneapolis has [illegible] to its wonderful ten-city. It is now the largest city west of Chicago, in the United States north, with the exception of San Francisco. The city directory, just completed, gives it a population of 100,000. When it absorbs St. Paul (the city limits of the two places are now only three miles apart), which it is likely to do within the next few years, it will make a respectable municipality of over 200,000 inhabitants. I have been here several times during the past decade, and whenever I revisit Minneapolis its magical growth astonishes me. This city is environed with a broad fringe of new houses, all erected this year, and ordinary town lots, at a radius of a mile and a half from the city's center, sell from $[illegible] to $2,000 a piece. There have been enormously profitable speculations in real estate during the past three years and any one who has watched the growth of Chicago will hesitate to assert that Minneapolis has outrun its boom. Sheppard, Knapp & Co., of New York are about to start a wholesale carpet house here, and there are rumors of several other large eastern houses grafting into this new field. The city is one of the quietest and most orderly in the west. Drinking places are comparatively few, and other pernicious features of new western towns exceptionally scarce. The town goes to bed at an early hour, and gets to work early in the morning. Everybody works—hunting the slipper, [illegible] and chasing the mercurial dollar. The [illegible] one meets in the hotels, stores, [illegible] and churches have "business" stamped upon him in plain letters. No one has any time for fooling, and apparently little for recreation. The next generation will do all that sort of thing for this one, and piously reflect: "What jolly old duffers our progenitors were to go hammering their poor old lives out for our special benefit!"

"RATS, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, crows, chipmunks, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

LONDON LETTERS.

News Notes and Comments Thereon—Resume of the Week's Happenings.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—London cable specials contain the following points:

TROUBLE IN INDIA.

Bitter opposition is continued against the measure providing that native tribunals in India may try European offenders. Bright addressed a large meeting during the week in favor of the measure, and was followed by a Hindoo lawyer, who spoke with such eloquence and to such perfect and musical English as to amaze and delight all his hearers. There is a cloud gathering in India, and uneasy rumors denote a growing dissatisfaction and unrest with the attitude of the resident English toward Ripon, because of their arrogant hostility against social advancement of refined and highly educated Indians. The late arbitrary and tyrannous imprisonment of a native editor for a harmless and unintentional libel, and the abrupt and unexplained refusal of redress by a higher tribunal at home, all tend to produce a dangerous feeling. The Indian pension list alone amounts to over $30,000,000 yearly, and the drain of taxation is already so burdensome as to be of itself almost unendurable. A population, on the other hand, intelligent, educated in English principles, and growing enormously, is beginning to think for itself on English principles to become conscious of its power, and to recognize the gross imposition it endures.

THE STOCK MARKET.

Stock markets here, which are now at the height of the dead season, have been unfavorably affected by the decline in foreign government securities and in American railroad stocks. The former move sent at first attracted most attention, for the public were almost apathetic to the continued decline in New York cable quotations. The general fall reported on Saturday morning led to a pressure of sales by genuine holders, and for the first time for some months prices in some instances were forced below the New York level. The amount of business transacted has been small. Investors do not come forward and speculations has been damped by recent dullness in Wall street. Dealers here have no choice but to put down prices whenever stocks are off. Up to the present, in spite of discouragement, American railroad securities have been regarded favorably, and purchases would certainly be resumed were any continued firmness shown in New York. There have been but few short sales, as speculators generally believe that a recovery is not far distant. In any event this market can only follow the lead given by cable quotations, and no disposition to buy will be shown until that recovery is established on your side. The heavily sold Eries have been pressed on New York advices. The decline on Saturday varied from 3 to [illegible] per cent. throughout the list.

A ROYAL SPENDTHRIFT.

The nauseating insolvency of the duke of Teck and the condition of royal mendicants generally continue to be freely discussed. The duke of Edinburgh went to Moscow to see his brother-in-law's coronation, and on Thursday the house was asked to vote £2000 for the expenses of that trip. Labouchere made a spirited attack on the measure, calling attention to the fact that £4000 had already been paid for the English ambassador's expenses on the same occasion, and saying that his royal highness ought to defray his own expenses when he wanted to visit his relations. The grant was, however, voted by a large majority though it would have been the other way if the members had voted according to the convictions they express outside the house. There is a rapidly growing resentment regarding these highway assaults upon the public treasury by members of the royal family. The duke of Edinburgh's parsimony and domestic meanness have become notorious. No one believes his excursion to Moscow cost him the £2000 which he has just received.

SAVED BY THE PRINCE OF WALES.

At the recent regatta at Cowes Lord Suffield's steam yacht Bulldog, while getting under way tried to cross the bows of the Marquis of Ormonde's steam yacht Morga, which was lying at anchor next to the royal yacht Osborne. The swift tide swept the Bulldog right under the high projecting bows of the Morga, carrying away the Bulldog's gunwale and both her masts. The escape of Lady Suffield and other ladies who were on the deck of the Bulldog at the moment of the collision was something marvelous. The Prince and Princess of Wales, their children and the Prince of Battenburg saw the accident from the cabin of the Osborne. The Prince of Wales, without losing a moment jumped into his steam launch seized the tiller himself and steered alongside the Bulldog, which was half under water and was in a helpless condition. A hawser was soon attached to the prince's launch and the unlucky Bulldog was towed into a place of safety.

PROPOSED DEBT REDUCTION.

A curious struggle is proceeding over the national debt reduction bill, with which the chief radical members of the opposition who favor a reduction of taxation and a reduction of the debt have been mollified. The real cause of the tory opposition arises from a desire to prevent the present appropriation for annuities falling due in 1885. The tories are not without hope of manipulating these annuities when they themselves may be in office. As Childers' project embraces a reduction of £171,000,000 during the next twenty years, without an increase of taxation, it is strongly supported among the commercial classes and economists, who are fearful lest English commerce may be crippled when labor cheapens in America. This proposition and the rapid abolition of the United States debt causes growing anxiety among thoughtful Englishmen.

UNHAPPY INFORMERS.

The Australian authorities have refused to allow Kavanagh and the other informers to land at Sydney, because they would have immediately have had to undertake to guard them against assassination. The home office has telegraphed to transfer them to the man-of-war Nelson while they remain. It is said to be the understood intention to put them on one of the Samoan or Friendly islands, where they cannot die of starvation and where there are no Irishmen to slay them.

A WARNING TO CONSPIRATORS.

It is thought that the summary conviction and severe punishment of the dynamite prisoners at Liverpool will have the effect of ending all nitro-glycerine enterprises for some time to come. The Dublin organ of the Irish party heartily approves the sentence and says no punishment is too severe for such cowardly criminals.

A DISCIPLE OF MALTHUS.

Sir William Armstrong has been considering the problem of increase in population in England, and has made public his opinion that its rapid growth is adverse to moral development, and that a further increase must be controlled by legislation. His idea is that the state should limit the number of a man's children.

"OUIDA'S" IRE AROUSED.

Miss de la Rame ("Ouida") writes angrily about a report in certain American papers stating that she is insane, and says she will take measures against those who have published such slanders.

A Little Social Talk.

Chicago Herald.

Now and then we get some funny ideas from New York papers. Apropos of the Anglomaniac idea, the New York Sun says:

"Rather a violent outbreak of matrimonial alliances has taken place between distinguished Englishmen and rich or pretty American girls during the last London season. The wedding of Miss Murphy of California and Sir Charles Michael Wolsely, a baronet whose pedigree dates back to the thirteenth century, was recently celebrated in London with much pomp and ceremony. Cardinal Manning himself officiated, and conferred vicariously the Papal blessing upon the wedded pair. Another celebrated California belle and beauty, Miss Flood, is said to have taken Lord Beaumont captive, and Mr. Beresford Hope, Jr., grandson of the late celebrated Viscount Beresford, is about to marry the daughter of Brigadier General Frost of St. Louis."

This sounds pretty, and, no doubt, the changes will be rung on it. As a matter of fact, Miss Murphy, a charming girl, is the daughter of a dry goods merchant (Murphy, Grant & Co.). Her father has been made a "marquis" (of Rome) by the pope. She has married a baronet of England. There are now two "marquises" of Rome in San Francisco—the "Marquis" D. J. Oliver and the "Marquis" R. W. Murphy. Neither of these honors have political significance but both came from the open-heartedness of the pope and a due appreciation of what from a lesser walk in life might be called "Peter's pence." People in San Francisco have not yet got through laughing at the "Marquis" Oliver—the "Marquis" R. W. Murphy will only add to their glee.

As to Lord Beaumont and Miss Flood, the young lady herself, had she the power to check newspaper comment, would do it with rollicking laughter. The story of Lord Beaumont is as old as the hills. Three years ago, being then on a trip to California, his lordship made a dead set. The lady is known to have $2,500,000 in 4 per cent bonds. These are her own. She likewise has the usual contingency in her father's estate of many millions. She is not a "belle" nor a "beauty"—she would laugh at the idea. She is a good, wholesome, stalwart woman of thirty; and learning definitely of Lord Beaumont's designs, she laughed a vigorous, stalwart, bonanza kind of a laugh and said she "guessed not." That was three years ago and that is all there is to Lord Beaumont's story. He was a fortune hunter trying to trade a title for money; she was an honest, true hearted American girl that knew her own business and could not be caught with any such chaff.

A Tremendous Irrigation Scheme.

Los Angeles Herald.

The most gigantic irrigation enterprise ever inaugurated in the state of California has been commenced in Fresno county, the canal for which will be the largest in the state, and fed by Kings river. The water is intended to irrigate 80,000,000 acres of rich land, at present barren through lack of water. The source of supply of this canal will be higher than any other debouching from the same stream. Its dimensions are, 100 feet in width at the bottom, inverse average of 15 feet in height and 8 feet wide at the top, broad enough for a wagon road; the depth of the water is expected to be 5 feet, with a fall of 18 inches to the mile. The dam in the mountain cañon whence the water is taken will be a wonderful and permanent one; it is 25 feet high, 800 feet long, 125 feet wide at the base and 15 feet wide on the top. It is riprapped on the inside with heavy rock and every precaution taken to make it sufficiently strong to securely hold the great weight of water that must be supported. The water is led into the canal from a large headgate, constructed of heavy timber, 150 feet in width and 16 feet high. It is planked over so as to make a bridge for heavy wagons and has wings to protect it from the floods. The canal is expected to carry 2300 cubic feet of water per second.

FAIR'S HALLUCINATION.

The Strange Mental Malady of the Nevada Senator.

Carson (Nev.) Appeal.

For some years past the friends of James G. Fair have hinted at a mental malady which affects the senator, and which they believed would, in time, end in insanity. It appears that some years ago, in California, he received severe injuries at the hands of a miner, who beat him about the head with a pick-handle, and from the effects of this murderous assault he has never recovered. Fair had promised the miner the next vacant place in the mine, and kept him several months lingering about the waiting works. One day the miner learned that Fair was simply having a little sport at his expense and made the assault described. A strange hallucination took possession of Fair and pursued him night and day. He told several of his friends that he was destined to die by a stroke of lightning, and this means of death seemed to him to be worse than all others. Several physicians treated him for his ailment, and one day he told a doctor in San Francisco that if he ever told the truth he would be struck dead by a thunderbolt from heaven. At first people thought that Fair was simply amusing himself at their expense, but it soon became evident that he was, in dead earnest and was trying to avert the calamity by every means in his power. He avoided the truth with a care born of long use of habit and studious training. Ever on his guard, he lied systematically to all whom he met and never suffered anything to escape his lips which could be twisted into a semblance of veracity. Sometimes, in a moment of absent-mindedness he would graze it rather closely, and then with a shudder the thought of his fate would recall him to his senses, and, lifting his eyes a moment toward heaven, he would roll out a miscellaneous assortment of the most delightful fictions, charming all who heard.

He lied systematically about the smallest matters. If he came up from Reno in his private conveyance, he would assure the household that he arrived by the train. When he started for Carson he always gave out that he had business in Truckee, and if he attended a horse race he would come and regale the family with the minute details of a cock fight. He would always in the morning call up his servant for his black suit, and after the man was out of sight Fair would don the black suit and put on a pepper-and-salt attire. "Hitch up the team and take me down to the Union," he would say, and then slip off on foot to the Savage. He would often stop men on the street and tell them that Mackay wanted to see them in the Curry office, when he knew that Mackay was up at the Sierra Nevada mine or down at San Francisco.

A few months ago he called upon one of the heads of the departments at Washington and asked his assistance in a new scheme of philanthropy. He proposed to erect an asylum for the orphans of the officers who died during the war. His idea was to expend $10,000,000 on the building and then endow it with a million a year. He wanted his name to get a bill framed which would make congress the custodian of the fund and insure the honest use of the vast donation. The man he toyed with for several weeks became almost insane with the idea of the vast responsibility of the scheme, for Fair insisted that he should direct all disbursements. He told him to select a site for the buildings and secure a good architect immediately. Senator Jones finally told the poor man that Fair was simply amusing himself with his favorite hobby and did not intend to do anything at all.

Fair has now settled down to perfect an elaborate system of falsification which will eclipse all the historical liars of the past. At one time he attended seances to confer with Baron Munchausen, but after two sittings the baron declined any further acquaintance with the senator. He has now nearly completed his system by which he claims to be able to keep the world constantly supplied with lies of the most improved pattern. He says he has already invented enough to last him to his eightieth year. He estimates that he can talk eight hours a day and never tell the truth once. His system cannot be described in this short paper. Those who have been allowed to inspect it pronounce it absolutely without law, authentic and self-repeating. It has for its basis the system by which algebraic and geometric equations are formulated, and everything is reduced to a mathematical certainty so as to insure a given amount of lies every day, and no lie is made to do service twice. His combination will last, as we have said, before, until his eightieth year; after that he has a vague horror that his end will come or he will be obliged to begin on the other end of his combination and repeat. He says he would rather die than be obliged to resort to this expedient. He now has no fears that he will be caught napping, and looks to the future with hope and confidence, and, like Ajax, will defy the lightning.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

Iowa republicans say their majority in the legislature to be chosen this fall will be large enough for all practical purposes.

Governor Butler says it is impossible to furnish the good name of Massachusetts. He ought to know, for he has tried harder than anybody else ever did.—Boston Herald.

The New York World wants the democrats to fight for an income tax, but the Commercial Advertiser, of the same city, fears that this might be construed as a personal reflection on Mr. Tilden.

Referring to General Phil Sheridan, a Louisville gentleman is quoted as saying: "The south has no further prejudice;" and, reading this, Ben Butler dropped the lid of his game eye and smiled.

Advance sheets of the state treasurer's annual report show the entire debt of Vermont to be $175,000, of which $135,000 is bonded. The receipts for the year were $568,000, and the disbursements $531,670.

Murphy, the English swimmer, who often challenged the late Captain Webb, and always maintained that he could never swim the Niagara whirlpool, was drowned the same day as Webb, in the Ribble whirlpool.

General Beauregard is quoted as believing that there was "a steady decline of the negro population." What did they decline? To drink, to vote the democratic ticket, or to invest in the Louisiana lottery?

It is reported from Ohio that John W. Bookwalter holds Senator Pendleton responsible for his defeat in his pursuit of the governorship, and that he intends to enter the race against him for the United States senatorship.

Frederick J. Phillips, the president's private secretary, has returned to Washington from Canada, where, in company with the president's son, he spent several weeks as the guest of the Restigouche salmon-fishing club.

It is reported from Ohio that John W. Bookwalter holds Senator Pendleton responsible for his defeat in his pursuit of the governorship, and that he intends to enter the race against him for the U. S. senatorship.

Against the advice of several leading temperance men, a prohibition convention has been held at Cleveland, O., and a full county and legislative ticket was placed in the field. The civil service reformers have every reason to look hopefully to the future. They have more than half won the battle by arousing public interest in the cause for which they labor. Every step in the future will be easier than those that have preceded, and while the past may be one of the most memorable years in the history of the reform, the future has more in store.

The society of "Friends" at Newberg, Yamhill county, are making arrangements to erect a college at that place. A considerable amount of money has been subscribed already and an active canvass will be commenced immediately to secure the required amount.

Register: The grain on the hill land in this county is not so good as that in the valley, and it seems a little strange that some of the earliest sown grain is the poorest. The reports of grain yields in this county are surprising, even to those who have been rather confident all the time. The oat crop will be under average, but the average yield of wheat will be the largest ever harvested in the county, to the acreage.

Its leaves are of an elongated form and keep green nearly all the year long, or until very heavy frost checks its growth. It stood the hard frost of last winter and also survives the heat nicely. Its young shoots are tender and stock eat it readily.

There will be, in a short time, ministers of six denominations at Spokane Falls—Baptist, Episcopal, Methodist, Congregational, Presbyterian and Catholic. There are four church buildings, and more to be built soon. Four Sunday schools hold session each Sunday.

There are five principal sawmills in the vicinity of Seattle, and these together with some smaller mills, are turning out about 250,000 feet of lumber daily, and still the demand is far ahead of the supply, in view of which several new mills are in course of construction.

Walla Walla Union: The present capacity of the Dayton woolen mills are about forty pairs of blankets, seventy-five yards of flannel, besides quantities of stocking yarn and other goods daily. Steam and water pipes lead throughout the building, the former for heating purposes and the latter to use in case of fire. The mill power is obtained from water taken out of the Touchet a mile and a quarter above the mills, and carried to its destination through a canal. Thirty hands are given steady employment at the mills, and from present indications that force will be doubled within a year, as the demand for Dayton goods is steadily on the increase.

TO LEAVE US.

Rev. T. L. Sails, for two years pastor of the M. E. church in this city, will ask to be removed at the annual conference which meets at Vancouver on Wednesday next, Bishop Warren presiding. His reason for this step is a conviction of the expediency of being transferred to a new field of labor, as a means of increasing his usefulness in the church. During his pastorate the M. E. church has prospered well, twenty-[illegible] members being added last year and thirty-six the present year, which increases the total membership to [illegible]. The church property has been improved in several ways and the indebtedness entirely liquidated. Mr. Sails will preach his farewell sermon on Sunday morning next. Judge Hoadly said that General Garfield was so greedy to get money that he did not care how he got it. Hoadly is a vote-buyer, a corrupter of conventions, an unprincipled turncoat, a political charlatan. Like a soldier of fortune he sells his sword for the most money he can get. Hoadly sells himself to the party that will give him the most honor. Garfield was a brave soldier, a pure and great statesman who went to his grave poor, leaving behind him a brilliant, unsullied name. NOTES ON ALASKA.

A Comprehensive Article from the Pen of Wm. A. Newell, M. D., LL. D., Governor of Washington.

DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY'S RESOURCES.

Game in Abundance—Magnificent Island Scenery—Alaska's Towns—A War Dance by the Sitkas, Etc.

[The following complete, interesting and instructive letter is kindly furnished by the author for publication in THE OREGONIAN.]

Alaska is a region of gigantic proportions, measuring 2200 miles from east to west and 1400 from north to south, containing an area of 580,000 square miles, equal in extent to that portion of our country east of the Mississippi river and north of the gulf states. It lies between 54.40° and 72° north latitude, the British possessions on the east, and extends far westward into the Pacific ocean.

The extent of shore-line on the Alaskan waters is estimated at 25,000 miles, a measurement equal to the circumference of the earth at the equator.

For purposes of description, it may properly be divided into continental and maritime divisions, the former being north and east, the latter south and west. The main land is by far the larger portion and stretches from British Columbia northward to the Polar sea and eastward to British possessions. The main country has a varied wooded, mountainous, broken and rocky surface, much of it moorland, including immense morasses and beds of bog meadow, and peat often covered with moss a foot in thickness, all interspersed with lagoons and dead lakes, with occasionally a large tract, especially upon the rivers, where grow in summer-time, in great luxuriance, wild grasses, beautiful large flowers, yellow and red, and rare plants; also, wild cranberries, which flourish abundantly upon the low lands, picked and marketed by Indians. Timber, large in many places, is usually dwarfed, the varieties being chiefly pine, cedar, oak and ash. Coal and iron are plentiful at all points; also, copper, antimony, lead, graphite. Other minerals may exist, but have not been discovered, save gold, of which there are well defined traces all over the main land.

ALASKA'S GAME—THE ALEUTIAN ISLANDS.

Reindeer, elk, deer, bear, wolves, wild goats, land otter and numerous musk ox frequent the entire country. This whole region is utterly worthless for agricultural purposes, but may be made useful for cattle and sheep raising if fodder and shelter can be provided for the long winters. Coaling stations may perhaps be established at points for whalers and steamers, which in coming time will trade in fur and fish upon the adjoining waters. The only really valuable portion of Alaska lies upon the coast and juts into the ocean, forming a body of semi-lunar shape, convexing northward, extending from the most western of the Aleutian group eastward to the continent at Cook's peninsula, which forms its base; thence downward to the northern line of British Columbia, a vast archipelago and ocean front. The Aleutian islands—a thousand or more in number—diminish in size and value as they are found westward, most of them being covered with forest trees—others being barren of vegetation—having a mountainous surface. They are inhabited by two thousand Aleuts, who are occupied in fishing and catching the valuable fur-bearing animals which frequent contiguous waters. The climate is usually mild, with occasional storms of great severity. A narrow strip of mainland from Mount St. Elias southward along the sea, with the Alaskan archipelago on the front, make up southern Alaska. The "main" is exceedingly mountainous, covered with impenetrable forests of cedar, spruce and pine trees, many of which are of great size and value, with rare spots where grain, grass, fruits and vegetables may flourish by cultivation. The Alaska cedar, which abounds, is a most valuable wood, white, soft, elastic, tough and somewhat aromatic, like sandal wood, susceptible of retaining a beautiful satin polish by the plane alone, and said to be adapted to ship building in all its requirements. It must also be largely introduced into use as material for cabinet ware.

THE ALEXANDER ARCHIPELAGO.

The Alexander archipelago consists of many hundreds of mountainous islands of volcanic formation, in size from a sharp peak rising like a pinnacle, or a pyramid of a thousand feet, to one of the mountain islands and groups of islands five and ten thousand feet above the waters. Some of them are bare mountain crags, but almost universally covered with forests, as they are upon the main. Animals more or less valuable for skins and furs, reindeer, moose, elk, deer, musk-ox, bear, white, black, cinnamon and grizzly, wolves, foxes black, silver and red, mink, beaver, marten, ermine, otter, sea, muskrats and hare are found largely in their natural haunts. The islands of St. George and St. Paul, although small in area, furnish nearly all the fine fur seal skins sold in the markets of the world, together with a hundred thousand dollars worth, annually of sea otter skins. Indeed, the waters of Alaska in their productions contribute the chief value of our productions in that remote country.

ALASKA'S WATERS, SALT AND FRESH.

The Yukon river, which empties into Behring sea near the straits, extends 2500 miles eastward, has five outlets, is seventy miles wide for a long distance from the delta and has been navigated by steamer for 2000 miles. A steamboat now makes two trips a year trading with Indians in fish and fur. The McKenzie, a river of large proportions, empties into the Arctic; the Stikeen and other great inland rivers flow into the labyrinth of bays, sounds and seas which border upon the coast. The great system of salt waters, which terminates in the Alaskan archipelago, has its base on Puget Sound, extending from the Gulf of Georgia through many seas to Cook's peninsula, from which springs the Aleutian pyramid of islands, and affords a straight and safe navigation for 1200 miles from Admiralty inlet. These waters, fresh and salt, constitute beyond doubt the great fish and water-fur producing reserve of the world. Increasing since time began, and without destruction, their quantity is beyond computation or comprehension. Their phosphorescent flashings, when disturbed by our steamer at night, made them distinctly visible, and they seemed to outnumber the very stars in multitude—a thick in many places as to be an obstacle to navigation. While anchored some of our passengers went out for fish and returned in an hour loaded. Salmon are of extraordinary size and of exceeding fine flavor; halibut, herring (equal to Holland or Scotch), trout, flounders, sardines and others constitute the varieties. Codfish are found in immense quantity all along the Aleutian banks, of which more than seven hundred miles in extent have been surveyed and tested with good result. Whales are becoming more numerous. We passed a school of fifty or more, and it was not unusual to see a brace at almost any lookout. Canning and drying are pursued only to a small extent; the field requires millions of capital for full occupation, and fortunate are they who inaugurate the trade. The climate of the continent is cold in winter and hot in summer, which seasons are very short. Snow falls to the depth of six or eight feet, and remains until spring time. Southern Alaska has a moderate winter temperature, and cool summers—fall and winter rains and moderate snow prevail. I found at Sitka the warmest day upon the coast, ninety-three degrees in the shade. The days are exceedingly short in winter and correspondingly long in summer. In June the absolute absence of daylight and twilight is less than one hour. In August it was not fairly dark at midnight.

ISLAND SCENERY.

The island scenery from the straits of San Juan de Fuca northward for a thousand miles is of the grandest character and defies description, increasing in extent and magnificence as you journey toward the Arctic seas. The waters are most beautiful, in many soundings fathomless; consisting of inlets, straits, channels, seas and bays, a few made miles in width, then narrowing to a [illegible] ... rapid, requiring the most vigilant skill of the navigator to avoid the disastrous fate of the war steamer Saranac, which was thus washed helplessly upon the rocks and quickly disappeared. The mountain islands which surround the traveler low, lofty, grand, adorned with the perennial green of the forest, stained with ice in the gulches, confine him apparently to a rock-bound lake, from which we escape only to be amazed by a new vision of beauty, and to confront another apparently impassable barrier, launching into Chatham straits, which stretch two hundred miles in a straight line toward the sea. Human eyes never gazed upon a grander vision, a clear atmosphere, with a bright summer sun, gave distinct outline to the mountain ranges skirting the passage as they appeared bare, rocky, verdant, divided by glaciers and tipped with snow, beautified with innumerable cascades, the overflow of snow-fed lakes, with, here and there upon their sides and summits the suspended tomb of a chief with lattice and streamers flapping to the wind, loomed up, then vanished in the long perspective. Lying far beyond, a thrilling telescopic vista of the Straits, the snow-clad Alaskan range, crag upon crag, peak upon peak, volcanoes living and dead—Cook, Crillon, Fairweather and Saint Elias—twenty thousand feet above the sea, all resplendent with the prismatic flashings of the setting sun, dazzling in universal colors, blaze saluted our astonished vision until the gates of night closed upon the gorgeous spectacle. For many days we sailed upon charming waters, going [illegible] passages and returning by others. Ascending the Taku, to observe the famed glacier, we were constantly charming [illegible] in size [illegible] independently along as impelled by [illegible], floating barge of beautiful cerulean. Ice broken and melted into all conceivable fantastic shapes—animals, statues, ships, obelisks, battlements and towers can be readily conjured up as they appear in the distance. Ofttimes one is startled by the toppling and falling of a huge pinnacle with terrific force lashing up the waters, and sending its echoes in resounding reverberations through the valleys. One can readily comprehend the foundations of sailors' fictions of phantom ships and skeleton arms with booming guns, which had pursued them so far out at sea. Glaciers are visible from almost every point. Stikeen glacier, the largest upon the hemisphere is six miles wide at the base as it borders upon the river, filling the canyons and gulches with solid ice up to the top of the mountains, 2000 feet or more in thickness, and extending backward toward the Arctic sea further than can be explored. Travelers have passed upon it for 100 miles, taking weeks of time in their journey, when its extent seemed boundless. Between the glacier and the river—which lie at right angles with each other—is a space—several hundred yards—of valley land; beyond is a barrier of solid broken granite rock of great height, which has evidently been pushed for ward by glacial power, a most enormous work, forming a breakwater against the rapid streams—the melted water from the glacier—which are thereby diverted, are called to find an inlet to the river. Passing with much difficulty and some danger of falling into the rapids, provided with a [illegible] ... made by [illegible] ... cause [illegible] ... course to a resting place upon the glacier from which one moves toward [illegible] and a third plateau, an elevated above the plain 200 or 300 feet. Messrs. Fleming Bros.:

Sirs,—I take this opportunity of informing you of the benefits I have derived from Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills. I have for two years past been afflicted with a severe pain over the eyes, accompanied with a nervousness and sense of dizziness; a malady beyond the power and skill of our physicians to relieve and cure, caused, as far as I myself could judge, by a diseased state of the liver and stomach. Some of the doctors tried bleeding, and various other remedies were tried, but all in vain, for the deep-rooted disease still stuck fast. At last, I procured a box of your valuable Liver Pills from a druggist here, and found, after taking a portion of them, that the disease and painful sensation over the eyes have almost entirely left me. I will close by advising all those afflicted as I have been, to procure the valuable medicine at once and save much time and pain, with little expense. With sincere gratitude and respect, I remain, yours respectfully,

GEO. W. RUSSELL, Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams, No. 248 Seventh street, testify that they have both been suffering with the liver complaint for about five years, during which time they have spent a large amount of money and tried many remedies, but to no purpose. Finally, hearing of Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, prepared by Fleming Bros. Pittsburgh, Pa., they purchased four boxes, which they took according to the directions accompanying each box, and now pronounce themselves perfectly cured of that distressing disease.

CONCERNING THE TELEGRAPH.

At the close of the last congress a report was submitted by Mr Bingham of Pennsylvania from the committee on postoffices and post-roads, on telegraph matters, in which he said "Whether a postal telegraph system shall be established or not, or whether the control of the telegraph business of the country shall be left in private hands, subject to such legislation as congress may deem advisable to secure reasonable competition without danger of constant absorption by the Western Union Telegraph Company, is a question to be seriously considered" The events of the past few weeks have forced upon this question a much more serious and general consideration than it was possible for this committee to have anticipated. And already a large number of influential newspapers are vigorously advocating the establishment of a postal telegraph system not as a government monopoly but as an adjunct to the mail service. Two of the ablest United States senators—Edmunds and Sherman—have been known for some time to favor a government telegraph. There is no doubt that congress is empowered by the constitution to establish telegraph communication among the states The supreme court has decided that "commercial intercourse is an element of commerce within the regulating power of congress. In volume 96 of the United States supreme court reports Chief Justice Waite says that "postoffices and post-roads are established to facilitate the transmission of intelligence Both commerce and the postal service are placed within the power of congress, because being national in their operation they should be under the protecting care of the government. The powers thus granted are not confined to the instrumentalities of commerce or the postal service known and in use when the constitution was adopted but they keep pace with the progress of the country and adapt themselves to the new developments of time and circumstances They extend from the horse with its rider to the stage coach; from the sailing vessel to the steamboat, from the coach and steamboat to the railroad, and from the railroad to the telegraph, as these new agencies are successively brought into use to meet the demands of increasing population and wealth. They were intended for the government of the business to which they relate, at all times and under all circumstances"

It is plainly intimated in these words that it was the opinion of the court that if the telegraph had existed when the constitution was adopted the government would then have taken charge of it. Whether it should do so now is simply a question of expediency and policy but that either one or the other of the two courses mentioned in the extract from the congressional committee's report will be adopted by congress ere long is highly probable Congress will be pressed either to provide for a government telegraph, or favor the people with such legislation as will secure to them reasonable competition without danger of constant absorption on the part of the Western Union Telegraph Company" It has been for several years the policy of this company to establish a monopoly of the telegraph and in the pursuit of this purpose it has persistently used all means it could lay hold of, and the report to which reference has been made says it has defeated bills which have been introduced in congress to cheapen the cost of telegraphic communication by the interposition of mysterious agencies and influences It has practically monopolized the telegraph business of the country since 1866 having absorbed the Pacific and Atlantic the Great Western, the Franklin the Southern and Atlantic, the Atlantic and Pacific, and the American Union companies and made of itself as its friends have boastfully said an army of occupation" This company now collects from the people for the dissemination of intelligence a sum sufficient to pay a dividend upon $80 000,000, while all its lines offices and other works could be duplicated it is said for $20,000 000 The evil consequences of such monopoly are very greatly increased, because it has a continuous life "Men may come and men may go" but his organized brain, capital and cupidity "go on forever" like Tennyson's brook they last until the fountains of its life are exhausted

It is useless to censure or rail at the Western Union for persisting in the policy of monopolizing the telegraphic business of the country because this is just what is to be expected it will do, or what any other company would do if it had opportunity The tendency of every business to this result, if there be no check upon it, is natural and sure But THE OREGONIAN is not with those who favor monopoly of the telegraph business by the government. There are many reasons against it First, it is a movement in the line of what is called "paternalism in government, that is, the tendency to depend on the government for everything, second it would afford enormous increase of party "patronage" and add vastly to the corruptions of politics, and third, the people never could afford to entrust this important service to a political party, for that is what it would come to under our present spoils system What the government might do is to take measures for gradual construction of its own lines, leaving the present companies to operate theirs This would provide a check upon abuses hitherto complained of, and would prevent abuses of government monopoly under our wretched civil service system But reform of the civil service ought to be pushed as a condition precedent to any action by the government in the direction indicated If the necessity of providing a remedy for telegraphic monopoly shall force civil service reform as a preliminary condition the gain in this last named particular will be even greater than in the other

A great garden party was given at the Grand Union hotel, Saratoga (Mr Hilton proprietor) recently Over 6000 invitations were sent out and 5000 were accepted. Not a Jew was present. If a Jew presented himself he would not be admitted. In point of fact Judge Hilton, in sending invitations to the guests at other hotels through the respective proprietors stated that no Israelites would be permitted under any consideration. Hilton's course in this was happily hit off by a Hebrew gentleman who remarked to a reporter "This is Judge Hilton's revenge for failing in the dry goods trade, it is rather puerile and the Jews can stand it"

Housekeepers in this country have looked forward to the time when the "railroad is through" in the hope that the domestic service problem would then be at an end, but it seems that we are not alone in the want of servants The St. Louis Times Dispatch says that in the east cigar factories and cotton mills have, by giving better work and employment to hundreds of women reduced the supply of possible cooks, who are therefore becoming so scarce that it is conspicuously evident that there is not and never will be enough to supply the demand So we shall have to cling unto John Chinaman with all his faults

A Berlin correspondent of the London News says that China can meet a hostile invasion between Tientsin and Pekin with an army of at least 150 000 troops "equipped and drilled equal to Europeans" They are armed with Mauser rifles and Krupp cannon.

The summer is passing away and nothing is being done to improve the street crossings which give so much annoyance during the long wet seasons. Will not the council do something to make the crossings crossable at least on the principal streets?

Invitations are out for a reception to Gen Sherman and party at Gen Miles' residence at Vancouver Barracks, on Friday evening next It is time we were moving in this matter

RIVER AND HARBOR WORK

A press dispatch a few days ago gave some notice of the filing in Washington of estimates for river and harbor work in Oregon and Washington next year The mail brings details which will be of interest For beginning the work of permanently improving the Columbia bar according to the plans adopted last year, the local engineer asks for $500 000 For continuing the work at the Cascades another $300 000 is asked, and it is stated that for the completion of this work $1,655 000 will be required For the permanent improvement of the Columbia and Willamette rivers St Helens Swan island, and for the completion of the work at the head of Sauvie's island for rebuilding the snag boat Corvallis and operating her and for operating the dredgers, $242 000 is asked for No estimates for the work at the mouth of the Willamette below the present work at the head of Sauvie's island, or for work at Walker's island or at Martin's island are made because as yet there has been no authorization for these localities.

The progress of the various works at the coast harbors is set forth with statements as to the effects of these works to this time, and estimates for their further execution The plan of improvement at the mouth of the Coquille was by a jetty from the south cape to cut a channel through the north cape and for closing the natural channel which is tortuous shoal, shifting, and obstructed by rocks The appropriation of $10,000 last year has all been expended and the jetty has been extended to a total length of 1365 feet. The effect of this work was shown from the beginning The old channel is now completely filled and a new and straight one has been formed along the line of the jetty where the north cape existed above the highest water before the work was begun The new channel is not only straight and deeper than the old channel but it is wholly free from rocks To complete the work of permanent improvement here will it is estimated cost $144 200, and $60,000 is asked for next year The work of deepening and straightening the channel at Coos bay by means of a jetty from the south cape of the entrance has been continued throughout the year and the jetty is now out something more than 2000 feet The beneficial effects of the work are already very great The local engineer asks for $150 000 to be expended next year At Yaquina bay the work of jetty extension is in active progress and will continue till the 1st of October At the beginning of the season the jetty was out 850 feet. To this 1430 feet have been added, and it is expected to put out 200 feet further before the season closes The channel has deepened here very noticeably since the work was begun and is now deeper than that of any of the smaller coast ports To complete the work at this place according to the plans will require $455 000 and the local engineer asks for $140 000 for next year

For the upper Willamette to complete works now begun and to keep the river clear of snags $31,500 is asked for It is desired also to build next season at least 2000 feet of wing dams For the improvement of the Snake and Clearwater rivers the engineer now has $11 000 on hand and work will soon be begun at Five-mile rapids and at Reuben rapids and during the winter it will continue to include Little Goose island and Log Cabin island on the Snake and Lent's chute and Island rapids on the Clearwater. For Snake river $50 000 has been asked for next year, and for the Clearwater $20 000 For the Puget Sound rivers $15 000 has been asked for $5000 for the Chehalis and $5000 for the Cowlitz

It is not to be expected that congress will grant more than a fraction of these demands but the size of that fraction depends largely upon the effort put forth this winter at Washington If a delegation of energetic and representative men will go and urge the importance of our demands we shall get a far greater amount than if the matter is left to itself If any special effort is made Portland will of course have to make it We are interested directly not only in the channels of the lower Columbia and Willamette rivers but in each of the various other proposed improvements unless it be that of the Puget Sound rivers Particularly is it important for Portland that the works at Yaquina bay, Coos bay and at the mouth of the Coquille be fully executed The coast trade will be a large element of Portland's business from this time on and every inch of water gained on the coast bars is a direct help to Portland

SELF DEPENDENCE

The strike of the telegraph operators seems to be following the course of most other strikes, that is, a weakness is becoming apparent and this weakness portends failure Every business which can hold out a little time against a strike without ruin to itself will pretty certainly beat these organized attempts to coerce it This is history; we are not speaking of the rights involved But we think there can be no question that these organized strikes are bad for the workmen themselves Much time is lost But this is not the worst The member of a "brotherhood" places his interests in the hands of his fellows He surrenders his own judgment as to his own affairs and leans upon and takes his orders from the mass It cannot be good for him to do so If his wages are not sufficient he ought to quit the service on his own account as soon as he can find something better A concerted strike means idleness often for a long period and sometimes failure at last, to gain the object Its basis is reliance on others when the individual's only true reliance is himself It keeps each one upon a level with the whole body, and urges the false doctrine that alliance with others can diminish the necessity for personal endeavor

No man can rise except through his own individuality As each tree though growing in the same soil watered by the same rains and warmed by the same sun as others, obeys its own law of growth preserves its own physical structure and produces its own peculiar fruit so each person though in the closest communion and intercourse with others and surrounded by similar influences, must be himself and must do his own duties contest his own struggles resist his own temptations and suffer his own penalties

Looking therefore at the subject from another side it may be remarked that too much dependence is placed on co operation for security from evil and too little reliance upon personal watchfulness and exertion There are some who seem to feel in a great measure released from obligations if they do not receive such aid, and some will plead the shortcomings of others as an excuse for their own

We would by no means disparage the effect of influence or discourage in the slightest the generous assistance which we all owe to one another or undervalue the important effect of a worthy example These are vital elements of growth and their results can never be fully estimated But they should not usurp the place of a proper self reliance nor diminish the exercise of individual powers Moral force must be a personal possession It can never be transferred and while we gladly welcome whatever is good from all sources it can only be food that must be digested before it can truly nourish us Material benefit may be conferred by simple gift but mental and moral activities can only be sustained by their own exercise Thoughts may be changed but not thought powers; moral help and encouragement may be given but virtue cannot be transferred, responsibility cannot be shifted

The most permanent good we can do to others is to nourish their individual strength To aid the physically destitute most effectively, food, fuel and clothing are not nearly so valuable as steady remunerative employment To educate a child it is not half so important to instill large amounts of information, so as to set his mind to work, to bring out his mental powers, to stimulate his thought and quicken his faculties And in moral life, especially in cities where men are massed together and inclined to lean upon each other, the best lesson to enforce is that real strength, to exist at all, must be strictly individual That which can not stand alone, but depends upon props and supports is but the semblance of virtue and will crumble before temptation A well developed body ever excites admiration but a well developed and self reliant spirit is a nobler thing

Though the communication containing a protest against increasing the salary of the superintendent of streets is written in a tone of asperity which seems needless yet THE OREGONIAN must say that it agrees with the writer that the costs of the office to the city ought not to be increased as proposed Major Sears no doubt is an excellent man for the position Probably even $3600 a year is not an adequate salary for a man of his attainments and experience It is natural perhaps that he should feel that the present salary is not enough If this is really the case the city ought to try to get on with men of less talent in that position No very radical change in the system of improving and managing our streets appears to be impending and the highest engineering skill seems not to be required A moderate salary therefore ought to secure all the service required

CHANGES IN NEW YORK

New York Sun

Mr Edward Ridley the dry goods merchant of Grand street who died this week was a representative man a type of a class of dealers who have risen from small beginnings to great fortune in New York within the last generation

Just about a generation and as generations are calculated Mr Ridley opened a small shop in Grand street then near the center of the city From that humble beginning his trade increased until when he died he was the head of a vast business establishment a veritable bazaar in which 1100 persons were employed What was the center in 1849 is now far down town The people of wealth and of fashion in New York live at a long distance from Grand street but it is an exceedingly active thoroughfare for retail trade to the east of the Bowery especially and runs through a very densely populated neighborhood

Yet Mr Ridley remained in Grand street and instead of losing by the migration of the rich and fashionable to the north of the island and far away from the east side his trade went on increasing at a rapid rate until when he died his establishment was one of the largest and most profitable in the United States and he left a fortune of several millions Nor was the fame of Mr Ridley's business confined to the population of the neighborhood in which it grew up By liberal advertising he made his bazaar known throughout the city and it prospered in spite of the removal from his vicinity of the wealthy from whom a dry goods merchant is usually supposed to get the custom necessary to remarkable success

But the prosperity of Mr Ridley and of others who started like him shows that the most valuable patronage is that of the great mass of the public It proves also that the best places for trade are not necessarily those which have a fashionable odor And further it indicates that business tact and ability have plenty of opportunities for success in New York in spite of the competition of concerns which had behind great capital and with a long-established and great reputation

Fifteen years ago for instance a vast establishment of A T Stewart was jealously regarded by many small merchants in the same general trade and was feared as a sort of monopoly against which they had little chance They felt that Mr Stewart could easily crush them out if he cared for their competition or found that it interfered with him He had the capital to do it and some men looked forward to the possibility of his concentrating in his hands all that was best in the retail dry goods trade in New York

Since that time however great fortunes have been made by many of the little traders at whom Mr Stewart may have looked with contempt Instead of the business coming more and more concentrated in his hand it has been more and more distributed and Broadway below Fourteenth street is no longer the great retail mart Mr Ridley's and other establishments down town and at a long remove from the fashionable quarter have prospered as never before A new center of trade has grown up in the Sixth avenue and the Eighth avenue has become the seat of establishments of remarkable success Instead of one great retail center there are now several such centers in New York and the prosperity of one large concern contributes to the advantage of the lesser shops by which it is surrounded

Twenty years ago the most far sighted merchants would not have foreseen the extraordinary development of retail trade in the west side avenues then lined with shops with a local custom only But men of business genius put new ideas into their trade and gradually drew patronage to a region which the run of buyers had never before frequented and which was looked down upon among them or till now it has grown to be famous throughout the United States

These men knew how to attract the public by the goods and prices they offered by their methods of conducting their business and by liberal advertising in the right places Within a few years they succeeded in building up a trade which compares favorably as to volume with the largest Mr Stewart ever had and which he had spent a lifetime to secure

Nor will there be fewer chances in the future It is not true as many people argue that the opportunities for getting rich have decreased greatly within the last generation They have never been so many or so good as they have been in that time—for those who knew how to take advantage of them And to day the best chances for money making are in New York The fortunes twenty five years from now will be chiefly those which have been made during that time and they will be held by those now poor or in humble circumstances Twenty five years from now remember the population of New York will probably be more than twice what it is now

SIMPLY A MISCALCULATION

Vancouver Independent

Rumors being in circulation here that Major John A Kress formerly in command of the Vancouver arsenal was to be court-martialed for embezzlement of government funds we take pleasure in stating that the story is false The facts in his case are given as follows by the Army and Navy Journal

The court-martial ordered at San Antonio in the case of Capt John A Kress is to try him on charges involving neglect of duty with reference to the erection of the new store-house at San Antonio of which he had charge He furnished plans and specifications for a building to cost $13 000 A congress appropriated but $11 300 these were returned at his request, and revised plans submitted for a building to cost exactly $11,300 These were approved and Capt Kress was instructed to begin operations and to be careful to keep the expenses within the amount stated Nothing more was heard about the matter until last May when he sent a report to the war department showing that the $11 000 appropriated had been expended, while the building was scarcely more than one half finished and would require $10 000 additional for its completion An investigation of the transactions of Capt Kress was made by Lieut Col F W Flagler ordnance department under direction of the war department In his report recently received at the war department he says that the $11 000 was judiciously expended as the building in its unfinished condition is worth every cent of the amount expended He says it is simply a case of miscalculation on Capt Kress' part

The Cost of English Yachting

St James Budget

Yachting is generally known to be a tolerably expensive sort of sport but few persons really appreciate the immense amount of capital that is spent in the amusement The yachts in commission this season number 2319 and their aggregate tonnage is 111 [illegible] tons To put it at the lowest figure the capital expended in building and equipping this fleet [illegible] amounts to close on three millions sterling I dare say this estimate is probably in one sense a good deal below the mark It must be remembered that there is a vast difference in cost between the cruiser and the racer Take the ten ton class of yachts for example A fairly good ten ton cruiser for cruising purposes can be bought for something like £1000 To have a first class ten ton racer designed and built is an entirely different affair that will cost from £4000 to £5000 And then a favorite boat turns out—as the best designed and best built boats sometimes will—a few minutes slower over a forty mile course than her rivals she sinks at once to the cruiser class and her price A racing boat too costs much more to use and to keep than a cruiser There are [illegible] the racing crew are picked men and they command high wages Yacht racing in fact within the last few years has created a special class of sailors as well as a special class of ship-builders and it provides both with highly lucrative employment

DEATH OF AN INDIAN CHIEF.—Jamaica ginger, originally intended as a harmless tonic, and calculated to be of great benefit in cases of griping and [illegible] distressful ailments, is likely to become [illegible] in this country from several instances [illegible] it has exerted a pernicious influence. The [illegible] in the killing of a high toned aboriginal [illegible] chief of the Umatilla tribe, not feeling well [illegible] and being forbidden by a stern [illegible] to indulge in which, flew to Jamaica ginger for relief. He got away with twenty bottles, and instead of being cured he was killed [illegible] the soul of the noble red man was borne away, as it were, on a stream of Jamaica ginger. His sorrowing subjects smothered his favorite race horse in order that it might accompany him to the happy hunting grounds and for three days past in their encampment across the river from Umatilla they have been bewailing the loss of the chief—and they [illegible] with howls and lamentations of the most [illegible] heart breaking style. Poor Skumka [illegible] whose neck is now cold, and what chiefly [illegible] his tribe is that the supply ran out at twenty bottles. Had he had a gross, he might now [illegible] careering over the plains of the Umatilla [illegible] favorite steed.

CONTEMPT OF THE LAW.—Two respectable looking young men appeared in the dock at the police court yesterday, charged with sleeping on a dock. [illegible] asked to plead they replied "guilty," but were [illegible] surprised when the judge [illegible] sentenced them to five days in jail. District Attorney [illegible], whose long experience with the [illegible] classes enables him to form a pretty correct judgment of a man when he sees him in the [illegible] dock, concluded that the two were not [illegible] and on the kindness of his heart [illegible]. He found that they had [illegible] the evening before from Astoria, and not having much money and being strangers here concluded to lie down in their blankets on the dock, not knowing that they were violating any city ordinance. They had a recommendation from a responsible party to a gentleman here, and were going to [illegible] this morning. The thought of being locked up [illegible] days and losing their job seemed to stagger [illegible]. Mr. Caples called the attention of the court [illegible] and on investigation they were allowed [illegible] it large—a favor for which they were duly thankful.

[illegible] VEGETABLES.—The quantity of vegetables and fruit which arrived by the last steamer [illegible] and consisted of crates of watermelons, cantaloupes, cabbage, cauliflower, peaches, [illegible], sweet potatoes, onions, celery, in fact nearly everything in the fruit and vegetable [illegible] in our markets at present comes from [illegible]. The extraordinary season of drought [illegible] prevailed furnishes some excuse for the [illegible] of vegetables here and the cold of last winter [illegible] for the scarcity of fruit. Our gardeners [illegible] be prepared to irrigate and so furnish the [illegible] market. The Chinese gardeners attend to [illegible] and in Chinatown can be seen full supplies of all the vegetables required by the Chinese. [illegible] is no reason why we should be importing vegetables at this season. In spring and early summer [illegible] climate of California renders it possible [illegible] the gardeners of that state to supply our market [illegible] many kinds of vegetables which it is impossible to produce here at that time but at this season [illegible] should be supplied by our own gardeners.

[illegible] TO GENERAL SHERMAN.—In response [illegible] invitation of George Wright Post, G. A. R., a number of the old soldiers met last evening at [illegible] of the post, and after a thorough [illegible] of the subject of the prospective visit of [illegible] Sherman to this city and state, it was the [illegible] expression of all present that a public [illegible] should be tendered him, and the following [illegible] was appointed an executive committee to [illegible] the matter in charge: [illegible] E. Conklin, N. B. [illegible], F. K. Arnold?, R. M. McMaster, [illegible], W. Allen, O. Summers, A. F. [illegible], C. E. DuBois, J. B. Reynolds and D. D. [illegible]. This committee subsequently met and adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, that a public reception be tendered General W. T. Sherman, [illegible] on Monday evening, August 27, 1883, at Mechanics' pavilion in this city, and that the citizens [illegible] Portland and the state at large be invited to participate." Subcommittees were appointed to complete the necessary arrangements, which will be made public through the press.

[illegible].—Alex. Hewson and Wm. Williamson were engaged in a friendly scuffle in [illegible] of the Oregon hotel on First street, when Hewson, thinking that Williamson was handling him [illegible] rougher than was consistent with a playful [illegible], became angered and sought to turn the sham [illegible] into a real one. Williamson, however, maintained his wonted good humor and sought to laugh [illegible] out of his anger, but this enraged him the [illegible], and it is said in his frenzy he drew a knife [illegible] sought to stab his friend. Williamson catching sight of the gleaming blade, turned and ran. [illegible] was calmed down by some friends, but [illegible] swore out a complaint before Justice [illegible] of an assault with a deadly weapon, and [illegible] was called for trial yesterday afternoon. [illegible] both parties met in court, however, they made [illegible] friends again, and the case was dismissed upon payment of $11.30, the costs which had already [illegible] in the case.

[illegible].—James Casey is a man who [illegible] off and on—more off than on—as book-keeper [illegible] Turk, who will be remembered as the [illegible] of a sailor boarding house. When Casey is [illegible] he is very boisterous and disorderly, though [illegible] when sober. Yesterday morning a [illegible] of the [illegible] asked Casey a civil question, [illegible] Casey struck him, and was straightway [illegible] by Detective Hudson, who happened to be [illegible]. In the afternoon he was tried by Justice [illegible] on the charge of assault and battery, and [illegible] sentence of ten days in the county jail. [illegible] when the roughs keep their rows to [illegible], but when they enter the journalistic [illegible] and pollute the sacred person of a reporter with their touch, swift and sure retribution [illegible].

[illegible] HIS INJURIES.—Michael Conley, the [illegible] who fell from the awning [illegible] St. Lawrence hotel upon the Belgian pavement of Second street Wednesday morning, died yesterday morning at 6 o'clock in his room at the hotel [illegible] the injuries. Mr. Conley was a man of about [illegible], and leaves a wife and family of five grown [illegible] living in East Portland. The remains [illegible] taken across the river to the home of his [illegible], where they now lie. The funeral will take [illegible] to-morrow. Much wonder is expressed over [illegible] in which the injuries were received, but [illegible] understood fact that Conley walked out of [illegible] and off the awning while in a state of somnambulism.

[illegible].—Yesterday afternoon Hugh Martin, [illegible] at Clark, Thompson & Co.'s [illegible] at the north end, started in as usual to [illegible] a fire in the [illegible] preparatory to melting [illegible]. He adjusted the shavings and kindlings [illegible] a match in the furnace. The fire not [illegible] quickly enough to suit him, Mr. Martin [illegible] blowing it when suddenly the flame [illegible] in his face, burning off his eyebrows, eyelashes and mustache, and badly blistering his nose [illegible]. Mr. Martin took the rest of the day off [illegible] walking around with a [illegible] over his face [illegible]. Fortunately his eyes were [illegible], and in a few days he will be all right.

[illegible] MAGUIRE [illegible].—John Maguire, formerly of New Market theatre, is now located in [illegible] City, Montana, and is on a fair way to prosperity, judging from the tenor of a letter received [illegible] a few days since. He is the proprietor [illegible] of the [illegible] Opera House, and has [illegible] successful with combinations. He writes [illegible] a population of 10,000, and is for [illegible] the best paying town on [illegible]. He anticipates the completion of the N. P. R. R. will make his success [illegible] years of varied fortunes [illegible] his present success will be of a [illegible].

[illegible] OBSTRUCTIONS.—The fence upon the [illegible] of Third and Washington streets has been [illegible] by a [illegible] of timber, which extends [illegible] the sidewalk. Any person [illegible] the corner quickly, or in passing down [illegible] at night, would be badly injured by running against that piece of timber [illegible] a good many ways in fixing up a fence, [illegible] would seem as though the way mentioned [illegible] within the law against obstructing the [illegible], and as such should receive the attention of the proper authorities.

[illegible] BY SAND.—The west-bound passenger on the Columbia river road was delayed half [illegible] yesterday by sand on the track between [illegible] Blalocks. There was the same delay the day [illegible]. A furious wind storm has prevailed for the [illegible] two days and had not subsided last night. By [illegible] the track has very and otherwise preparing [illegible] sand storms, but little trouble has [illegible] experienced this summer, and beyond slight [illegible] occurred this week, it is believed the [illegible] of keeping the road clear has been solved.

[illegible] THE PEACE.—Dan Collins, a shoe[illegible], who when sober is a very decent fellow, was [illegible] in the police court yesterday on a charge [illegible] to kill Jawice Greene. Dan appeared [illegible] nothing about the matter, and, therefore, [illegible] defense to make. It was proven that he had [illegible] around Mr. Greene's office for several [illegible] and had expressed a very decided intention of [illegible] in his youthful bloom, a scheme to [illegible] decidedly objected. The court decided to [illegible] under $300 bonds to keep the peace.

[illegible] CIRCUIT COURT WORK.—The last term of the circuit court began on May 7 and held sixty-[illegible] judicial days, during which time there have [illegible] jury trials, forty-one convictions and [illegible] acquittals; [illegible] true bills, and [illegible] dismissed, [illegible] verdict set aside; decrees granted in [illegible] divorce cases; two suits for divorce [illegible] dismissed. During the term A. J. [illegible], the clerk, has written 496 pages of the [illegible] small amount of work.

[illegible] OF SCHOOL CHILDREN.—Yesterday afternoon [illegible] sixty pupils were present at Masonic [illegible]. An hour was spent in drilling, under the [illegible] of Prof. Jackson. The city superintendent, Prof. Warren, were present and assisted. A [illegible] will take place next Friday, at 2 [illegible] same place. The words for the song [illegible] and the work has thereby much facilitated [illegible] more voices will no doubt be added.

[illegible] VACATION.—District Attorney John [illegible], who has always been most constant and [illegible] in the performance of his official duties, [illegible] been absent from his post for more than [illegible] leaves on the steamer this evening for [illegible] for a few days' well-earned vacation, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Jennie [illegible], one of the popular teachers in the public [illegible].

TAKEN TO DOUGLAS COUNTY.—As surmised by THE OREGONIAN yesterday, the damage suit of Morris against the publishers of the Polaris, was "dismissed" because the plaintiff intends to bring suit against those parties who originated the alleged slander. This will of necessity transfer the matter into the court for Douglas county, which, it is said, will be done at the next regular term.

LECTURING TOUR.—Dr. J. W. Watts, president of the State Temperance Alliance, will go to Eastern Oregon next Tuesday, August 21, to lecture for a month on temperance. Any correspondence will reach him by being addressed to Walla Walla. After his return he will visit many of the principal points in this valley and lecture on the alliance work.

YELLOWSTONE PARK.—The Northern Pacific Railroad Company have just issued for free distribution a pamphlet description of Yellowstone park. It is a splendid specimen of the engraver's and printer's art, and the descriptive portion is very fine. The illustrations will compare favorably with the best in Harper's or the Century Magazine.

BACK IN JAIL AGAIN.—"Mickey Phat," who was sentenced to ninety days in the city jail, and on account of valuable services in cleaning up the building given his liberty before his sentence expired, was back in the dock yesterday on a charge of assault and battery. He was fined $25, and returned to his old quarters.

Dinnie and McMillan both leave the city next week, the former going east and the latter to San Francisco. Their appearance at Gambrinus park Sunday will therefore be their last in the city.

Gambrinus park, where Dinnie and McMillan are to wrestle their final match next Sunday, is at the head of B street. The Washington street cars go directly to the gates of the park, and will leave the corner of Washington and First streets every five minutes.

George Hill, the proprietor of the most disreputable variety theater in Astoria, well known as the lowest and most dangerous of all the dens in the very worst slums of the Pacific coast, was arrested the other day for keeping open after midnight and forfeited bail of $50 rather than appear in court for trial.

The dock at the rear of the Willamette Iron Works presents a scene of great activity at present. The railroad ferry boat is having her machinery set up after being overhauled, the Oswego is having a new propeller put in, the Jefferson street ferry is receiving her boilers and machinery, and the new steamer for Gray's harbor her finishing touches.

FOR THE GRANT CUP.

No Prospects of a Race To-day—The P. R. A. to Pull Against Time.

The fifth contest for the Grant cup will take place to-day at 4 P. M., sharp, over the usual three-mile course, the start and finish being on a line with Pine street. The judges are as follows: M. F. Spencer, A. F. Graham, and A. J. Coffee; time-keeper, S. B. Greenberg. The race is for amateurs only, and the judges will be guided in their definition of amateur by that adopted by the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. Yesterday a communication was received by A. J. Coffee, captain of the Portland Rowing Association, asking for a postponement of the race for four weeks, from Mr. Graham, deputy captain of the Willamettes. An answer was sent to the effect that a postponement of one week would be granted; but this was refused; so to-day, in the event of there being no contesting crew, the Portland Rowing Association crew—Teal stroke, Malarkey 3, Quackenbush 2, White bow—will pull against time. The best previous time is 20 minutes and 7 seconds. It is to be hoped the Willamettes will yet put in a crew for the Grant cup.

At one time there was a difference of opinion as to whether the Grant cup was given for a free-for-all race, or free-for-all "amateurs." The latter opinion has prevailed as will be seen by the fact of the judges being guided by the National Association of Amateurs in their rulings. That it is the right view is most reasonable, as when the cup was offered the only organized clubs or crews were those of the Willamettes and P. R. A., both strictly amateurs. It was given to be contested for by these clubs and other legally qualified crews eligible by reason of their record to contend with the home club. As the home clubs were amateurs, it follows that none but amateurs were entitled to row for it. Friends of both clubs donated the prize, and it is hardly supposed that their own friends would give the cup and then prescribe such conditions as to bar the very men they were seeking to encourage from participating in races for it. It is therefore just in the judges taking the decided stand they do.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE OSBORNES' ENTERTAINMENT.—These excellent people, though not widely heralded, opened out to a good house at New Market theater last evening. The entertainment which they give is neat in every respect, and is not only highly amusing, but also a real intellectual feast. Mrs. Osborne has the easy, unassuming manners of a charming and vivacious soubrette, while she adds to her pleasing ways the accomplishment of singing, in clear, sweet and mellow tones, the dear old melodies of various lands. As a mimic, in foreign dialects, she has few equals, and her elocutionary powers are strong and well trained. She is a woman of rare versatility, showing an acute dramatic conception in everything she undertakes from the farcical to the tragic. Her husband, a careful and painstaking comedian, assisted in rendering the evening most enjoyable to all who attended. Besides the Osbornes themselves there are several other people who take part in a side-splitting farce with which the entertainment closes. Instrumental music is furnished at intervals during the evening by James F. Hayes, a skilled performer who adds much to the pleasure of the audience. A matinee and evening performance will be given by these people to-day, the last before their departure for the east.

CRICKET TO-DAY.

The return match between the married and single members of the Portland Cricket Club will take place at 2 P. M. to-day, at the Oaks, East Portland. On last Saturday the single men won easily, but from what we hear the result may be reversed this afternoon. Ladies are especially invited. The teams will be nearly as follows:

Married—Rome, Andrews, Gilman, Crocker, Creighton, Cgilbus, Kinross, Beal, Graeme, Holman, Mitchel, Dickinson.

Single—Warren, Andrews, Smith, Readnar, Bentget, Bourne, Ritchie, Manion, Cooper, McKay, Ogilvie.

The ground has been carefully prepared and a close and exciting match will undoubtedly result.

MOCKERY OF JUSTICE.

Joe Hays, the San Francisco Tough, Who Killed Elias Baker of this City, in Astoria, is Acquitted by the Verdict of a Jury.

The Astorian of yesterday morning gives the following account of the last day of the Hays murder trial, and the final result:

"The court room was even more densely crowded yesterday than the day before by those who watched the progress of the trial of Jos. Hays for the alleged murder of E. D. Baker, which has occupied the attention of the court since Wednesday morning. In continuance of the prosecution yesterday morning E. Thompson, H. McCormack and J. Johnson were placed on the witness stand and at the conclusion of their testimony court adjourned to 1 P. M.

Upon reassembling the following witnesses were called by counsel for defendant: Drs. Baker and Fulton, F. Wallace, Geo. Hill and Peter Hall, whereupon defense rested and the case went to the jury, no rebutting testimony having been offered. F. D. Winton opened for the prosecution, and in an exposition of the case on behalf of the state, claimed that the testimony showed a deliberate and successful attempt on the part of the defendant, Hays, to murder; that more particularly the evidence of Chas. Radmeyer and Hattie Marks pointed to him as the man who committed the murder, and that justice demanded a verdict commensurate in severity with the magnitude of the crime committed. He was followed by F. R. Strong for the defense, who, commenting on the testimony offered and the circumstances under which the crime was alleged to have occurred, claimed that the testimony adduced by the prosecution was not sufficiently strong to justify a verdict of condemnation, and that under no consideration could a final penalty of right attach to the punishment of the crime laid to have been committed.

He was followed by C. W. Fulton, who went at length into the history of the affair and the circumstances which had preceded it, and in review of the testimony and the motives ascribed to defendant argued that those motives did not exist in fact and that a strict interpretation of the testimony must of necessity result in acquittal; that though it was without doubt a murder had been committed, yet all that had been brought forward by the prosecution had failed to substantiate the assertion of the defendant's guilt.

District Attorney McBride closed for the state and in answer to preceding counsel spoke of the necessity of impartial justice and the protection demanded by society, he took up the testimony of the different witnesses and in comment argued that it was most direct and conclusive and furnished abundant proof that the defendant was guilty, and that a verdict to that effect should be rendered by the jury.

At 6 o'clock the judge made the usual charge to the jury who retired to their room to consult as to their verdict.

About 10:30 the jury sent word that they had agreed. The court was sent for, and presently the several officers came in one by one. The sheriff brought in the prisoner, and at 11 o'clock, counsel being present, the jury filed in. Judge Bennett asked the foreman if they had agreed upon a verdict, and being answered in the affirmative asked for the verdict, which was handed him. The verdict was "Not guilty."

Editorially the Astorian comments upon the result of the trial as follows: "At 11 o'clock last night a jury brought in a verdict of 'not guilty.' While trial is pending it is not the province of a newspaper to comment, but after it is all over, the action of the jury is fit subject for an expressed opinion. We believe the verdict in this case will be read with surprise by every one, and that it is a mockery of justice. It is just the same as saying that killing in Clatsop county is not a punishable offense; it is a tacit surrender of all safeguard, and will be taken as an invitation to all to commit deeds of lawlessness.

Let us not be misunderstood. We do not question the motives, the integrity nor the intentions of the jury that brought in that verdict, but the irresistible logic of such action as theirs is that a man can be killed in Astoria in cold blood and the murderer go free. Every pimp in the country can make this place his headquarters and if one of them gets into trouble twelve good men and true can acquit him, and it will be all right."

Why the Verdict Was Given.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

ASTORIA, Aug. 17.—There has been much unfavorable comment in the streets to-day at the result of the trial and also concerning the mental qualifications of the jurors. Your correspondent interviewed eight of them to-day and ascertained that the acquittal resulted from a sense of their duty to give the accused the benefit of a doubt. They affirm that no witness swore to having seen a knife in Hayes' hand when Baker was stabbed, but one witness did swear he saw a knife in another man's hand, and that in the same affray a Greek fisherman had both wrists cut by another man than Hayes.

Hattie Marks, the variety waitress, swore on direct examination that she heard Hayes say to a man, "Spud, open the door, for I have cut Baker." In the cross examination she admitted that she might have been mistaken as to the words uttered. They also declared again she was sure he used them, but admitted the habit of drinking while acting as a waitress. Her prevarication and want of direct proof that Hayes was seen with a knife at the time of the stabbing, and the prosecution not producing "Spud" to corroborate Hattie's assertion, was made the most of by Strong and Fulton, defendant's counsel, and the jury say, made the case one of circumstantial evidence, and consequently they gave the prisoner the benefit of the doubt, as the law provides. Yet, at the first vote, they stood eight for guilty, to four not. This led to a discussion of the evidence. The second ballot stood seven not guilty; the third eight, the fourth ten, the fifth eleven, and on the sixth the verdict was agreed on. It is now in order for Hayes to appreciate his lucky escape from the rope which dangled over his head, and not tarry in his departure for other scenes.

ASTORIA ITEMS.

From the Astorian, Aug. 17.

The Trevelyan has arrived out.

Special council meeting to-night.

J. B. Montgomery is about through sawing lumber for the transfer at Cottonwood rock.

The steamer Oregon took on several thousand cases of salmon and left out at half-past 4 yesterday afternoon.

The cool mists of the last forty-eight hours are sending many of the campers and seaside visitors back to headquarters in their city homes.

The old fashioned mist blew in yesterday from the south, and the fog, trailed as long been in the deep bosom of the ocean buried, hung low amid the firs.

Peter Smith, who outraged the sick woman at Brookfield, W. T., was reported to be unconscious last evening, and it is thought that he will not recover. It would certainly be money in his pocket to die quietly and without further aid than that already afforded him.

At an early hour yesterday morning the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Bozorth was seized with convulsions, and died in a few minutes. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and was largely attended by sorrowing friends, who deeply sympathize with the afflicted parents in their bereavement.

The extension of Cedar street westward will be of great benefit to that part of the city, and will make a handsome thoroughfare. Should the council conclude to purchase two lots, and thus enable the streets in Shively's and McClure's Astoria to join without any jogs or crooks, it would add greatly to the appearance of the vicinity and the convenience of its occupants.

The fact that codfish in apparently large numbers have been found off the Oregon coast at various times has led to a project on the part of some of our Astoria citizens to establish a cod fishery, and arrangements are now in progress with the intention of seeing what can be done in the matter. This valuable salt water fish has been met with off the Coquille coast, and is said to be found as far north as Tillamook rock. If so and the fish comes in such prodigious quantities as is alleged, there will be nothing to prevent the establishment of a Pacific coast cod fishery, with headquarters at Astoria.

Romantic Elopement.

Victoria Post.

About six or seven weeks ago the steamship from San Francisco brought a number of hands for the railway works at Yale. Among the number were two who seemed to be much attached to each other. The elder was a man of about 30, quite plain in appearance, but evidently a well-educated gentleman. The younger appeared to be about 16 years of age, with a remarkably winning face, wearing a large hat drawn well over his eyes, small hands and natty little feet. With the party these two left this city for Yale, and immediately commenced work on the road, the supposed boy doing his share of the sawing and chopping with the rest, and gaining many friends by his gentle and unobtrusive manners. After about ten or twelve days the elder of the two friends became sick and he had to be removed to the hospital where he was followed and nursed by his devoted little companion. The medical attendants soon discovered, however, that the supposed youth was a young lady, and the wife of the sick man. She was immediately taken to the house of a lady residing at Yale, where, after discarding her masculine attire and assuming more befitting garments, she disclosed the fact that with her husband she had eloped from San Francisco, where her father and stepmother resided. They had objected to her choice and wanted her to accept the attentions of a man she disliked. Her lover persuaded her to leave home and after being married they took the steamer for Victoria—the young wife disguised as a boy in order to elude pursuit. The enthusiasm and admiration of the rough men with whom the young lady worked knew no bounds when they learned that their quiet little companion was a girl, and that she had endured the hardships of a camp life in order to be near her husband. The husband returned to San Francisco a fortnight ago, leaving his wife with some kind friends at Yale. Having secured a house, and furnished it, he wrote for his young wife to come and the brave little lady arrived down by the steamer R. P. Rithet. She sailed for San Francisco on the Dakota to join her husband. The heroic conduct of the young lady has been the general theme of conversation at Yale for some days, and she bears away the good wishes of her many friends for a bright future, unclouded by trouble or sorrow.

RECEPTION TO GENERAL SHERMAN.

Ellsworth Post, G. A. R., of Vancouver, asks the Co-operation of Portland Posts.

The following communication, received yesterday, explains itself. There is no doubt that a reception worthy of General Sherman will be tendered him:

VANCOUVER, W. T., Aug. 17.

To the Post Commander, George Wright Post G. A. R., Portland, Oregon:

COMRADE COMMANDER—I notice, with sincere pleasure, that your post has in consideration the matter of aiding in properly receiving General Sherman on his approaching last official visit to our shores. On behalf of the G. A. R. post which I have the honor to command, I offer hearty fraternal assistance in any and all ways tending to success of your efforts.

We are told that whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well, and we know that whatever Portland does is well done, therefore, let us have Portland do this thing which it is so proper to have well done, and let us, ex-soldiers, fully and generously unite and all do great honor to ourselves in honoring the gallant veteran who so grandly applied his God-given talents in the dark hour of our nation's need. In your magnificent pavilion let 30,000 citizens have an opportunity to look upon and hear once more him who from Atlanta to Savannah brought glad tidings of great joy.

The steamer Lurline, which is to make a special trip to carry General Sherman and party from Kalama to Vancouver on the 23d instant, offers free transportation to all authorized committees desiring to wait on the general and consult his wishes regarding the proposed reception.

That representative American soldier, Gen. H. A. Morrow—the citizen soldier of two great epochs in our country's history—has magnanimously tendered, as a gratuity, for the reception of Gen. Sherman, to be given in Portland, the services of the splendid band of the 21st Infantry.

I take the liberty of suggesting that all G. A. R. posts on lines of railroad and steamboat travel be invited to participate, and that Mr. Prescott be requested to order a reduced fare—say 40 per cent off—for the occasion.

We over here hope that the Villard celebration will not prevent the offering of this well merited, gracious tribute to the commanding general of the army, who so long and so faithfully has believed in, and hoped for the fulfillment of, the glorious destiny of our great northwest, and as he now comes in time to witness but the first really tangible prelude to the fruition of his hopes, so we may let our efforts to honor him, be as the olive of the great feast by which it is intended to mark the fact that from Maine to Oregon we are one united nation—and who, under God, has contributed more than General Sherman to make this possible? Yours in F. C. & L.,

JOHN D. GEOGHEGAN,
Post Commander Ellsworth Post, 2, G. A. R.

Vancouver Independent.

The amateur theatricals at the garrison last Monday night, under the auspices of Mrs. Gen. Greene, were in every way successful. In "Aunt Charlotte's Maid" Lieut. Parke the persecuted lover, notwithstanding the difficulties of the role, and the fact that he was almost continuously before the audience, rendered the part in a manner at once creditable to his admirable self-possession and dramatic taste. Mrs. Duncan, as "Aunt Charlotte," looked and acted the part almost to perfection, and Mrs. Clarke, (23d Infantry,) as "Matilda Jones," was as piquant, lively and native a young lady as ever intrigued for a husband. Miss Kate Greene made her debut as "Fanny Volley," winning much deserved applause by her graceful and easy manner. "Pivot," the seedy lawyer, taken by Major Elderkin, was the hit of the evening. The major's excellent "make-up" added not a little to the success of the character. The part of "Major Volley," the retired English officer was acceptably filled by K. G. Morrow.

During the interlude between the pieces, Mrs. Baldwin and Mrs. Duncan sang in duet the beautiful song "Cheerfulness," and the rounds of applause which followed showed the appreciation of the audience. The second piece, "Who Killed Cock Robin," though quite difficult, was rendered in a manner highly complimentary to all.

Miss Lee Boyle, as "Santella," the impetuous Mexican girl, was charmingly captivating, by turns willful, revengeful, gentle, loving; the character of "Santella" is full of contradictions, requiring great judgment and discrimination in its impersonation, and it is only justice to Miss Boyle to say that her acting in this part was the result of careful and thoughtful study. The character of "Able Tinkle" gave Major Elderkin a second opportunity of exhibition of decided dramatic talent. "Jack Hagget," the adventurer, found an excellent delineator in Lieut. Bonesteel, whose natural expression well became the character. Mrs. Bonesteel, as "Hannah," the maid, gave a spirited and pleasing rendition of this part.

The orchestra of the 21st Infantry band, under the leadership of Prof. Oeckele, furnished excellent music during the evening.

It is a fact which can be proven by a single trial that the flavor given to cakes, puddings, creams and sauces by Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts, are as natural as the fruit from which they are made. Dr. Price's for creams, cakes etc., are as much unlike, in delicate flavor and strength, the cheap extracts, as can possibly be imagined.

STREET SUPERINTENDENT'S SALARY.

A Protest Against the Proposed Ordinance to Increase It.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

If there ever was, or ever will be, a time when the entire press of this city should with one voice come to the rescue of the city treasury, and stand by the mayor in his efforts to check and suppress jobbery it is at this time. I refer particularly now to an attempt that is being made to raise the salary of the street superintendent to an extravagant figure, and at the same time employ other men at the expense of the city to perform the duties and labor of that office. At the time when Major A. F. Sears accepted the appointment to that position, he did so with the full knowledge that the salary was $1800 per annum, and when he took the oath of office he affirmed and ratified that contract, and with an oath and his own signature promised and agreed to perform all the duties pertaining to that office, well knowing the sum of $1800 to be the lawful salary.

If the citizens and taxpayers of Portland desire a little further light on this modest piece of work, they may be reminded that Councilman Alfred F. Sears, Jr., is the son of his father, Alfred F. Sears, Sr., and that Sears, Jr., bore a hand in that little arrangement by which Sears, Sr., was appointed street superintendent; and now the ink is scarcely dry, where the signature of the latter appears to his oath of office, and Councilman Alfred F. Sears, Jr., comes before the council and asks that his father's salary be raised from the sum of $1800 per annum to $3100 per annum, and that a corps of men be employed to do the work besides.

Allow me further to say, that there are plenty of competent and capable men who will be perfectly willing to accept the office at the original salary with the addition, perhaps, of one competent assistant.

It may be suggested in this connection, that if Sears, Sr., is dissatisfied with his contract, he can apply to the city council for leave to step down and out, and that Sears, Jr., should seek other fields than that of the city treasury in which to carry out the precept, "Honor thy father."

Perhaps Sears, Jr., will deign to descend from the giddy heights which he has reached, to a level with citizens and taxpayers of the city, and explain to them the wherefore they shall be taxed to pay a salary of $3100 per annum, together with salaries of assistants and supernumeraries, at an extra cost of $22-0 more, making a grand sum total of $5250."

CITIZEN

LARGE ROSE BUSH.

TILLAMOOK, Aug. 11.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Enclosed find a well developed head of timothy eleven and one-fourth inches in length. How is that for Tillamook in an extremely dry year? I also have in my possession a section of the common wild rose, cut from the body of one that grew upon my place, that measures two and three-quarter inches in diameter. The specimen was cut six inches from the ground. The shrub when standing was nearly nine feet in hight, and bore along with others of its kind that grew in the vicinity, fruit nearly as large as the hickory nut. It is simply a gigantic specimen of the common wild rose met with everywhere in the Willamette valley, and a few of which are found upon the coast. I claim for it that it is the largest specimen to be found in the state, and perhaps I do not go too far when I claim that it is probably the largest in existence, for botanists sometimes in defining the great rose family, speak of the "little wild rose," evidently to distinguish its usual dwarfish growth from that of its tall domesticated brethren, and a shrub "from two to four feet in hight." I will mail it to any collector of botanical curiosities upon application.

F. M. LAMB.

[It is scarcely possible that a larger rose bush than the one above alluded to can be found anywhere. But when botanists allude to the "little wild rose," it is probably the size of the flower which is referred to and not the bush.]

HEAVY YIELD OF OATS.

WILDERVILLE, Josephine Co., Aug. 11.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I finished threshing to-day. I threshed from 1¼ acres of land 160 bushels of New Zealand white side oats by measure, and by weight they went 111 bushels to the acre. They were threshed by John Wells & Co. Who can beat it?

THE CHEMIST AND THE ROSE.

There once was a chemist who found a rose,
Dewy and fresh in its fragrant bloom.
"I wonder," quoth he, "how this fair flower grows
And from whence it gathers its sweet perfume."

So he plucked the rose in vain belief:
"I will carry it home and search out where,
Deftly hidden in petal or leaf,
Is this fragrance sweet that scents the air."

Then over his fire with alembic and still
He burned it up, and he boiled it down
With acids and alkalies, until
The rose and its sweet perfume were gone.

'Tis folly indeed that one should care
The secrets of life to analyze;
To drink one's fill of the perfumed air
Is the only way to be truly wise.
—Walter Learned, in Good Cheer.

THE MISSION OF JOURNALISM.

From an Address by Charles E. Smith of the Philadelphia Press.

Journalism promises to be the one career which must be forever striking out in new directions. It has been two or three times completely revolutionized in [illegible] mechanical facilities, and it is equally revolutionized in its methods. When Horace Greeley wanted to enforce the policy of protection on congress, he [illegible] up the arguments in a powerful leader and [illegible] and reiterated it day after day. When the journal of 1883 wants to make an impression on the same question it not only opens the artillery of the editorial page, but summons the telegraph to its aid, musters the opinions of the business interests of the entire country through their leading representatives, and fires a broadside of twenty columns, [illegible] and delivered within twenty-four hours. Through the agency which it keeps at every important center, it is able instantly to gather the voice of the whole land and speak it with tremendous power and effect.

A good deal of thought has latterly been directed to [illegible] of journalism, and there is much to be said in favor of a more systematic and well-digested preparation for the requirements and responsibilities. It is true that the successful editor, like the poet, is born and not made. What are the qualities? [illegible] judgment; an unfailing [illegible] with popular impulses; [illegible] to-day what the world will want to learn to-morrow; the art of getting [illegible]. No [illegible] can create these attributes. No [illegible] can supply the practical sagacity which underlies all successful journalistic effort. And yet there is very much of the qualification which is necessary for sound journalistic work that might be achieved in a well-planned course of education. It used to be said that the composing-room was the best school of journalism, and [illegible] Weed and Horace Greeley were pointed to as conspicuous illustrations of the great editors who had graduated with no other diploma than that of the printing-office. But they succeeded, not because of the lack of full early education, but in spite of it. Very true it is that much of the [illegible] readiness and dexterity indispensable to journalistic progress can only be acquired in the newspaper office itself; but equally true that the editor who possesses a broad knowledge of history, political economy, general literature and the politics is far better equipped than the one who has no preparation beyond what is called special training.

The coming newspaper will concern itself less with the petty, disconnected, accidental or mere sensational occurrences and more with the questions which strike their roots into the social, political and business life. Out of the 10,000 [illegible] which [illegible] themselves in an [illegible] field, it will make a better selection. It will deal with a higher range of topics and command a higher range of talent. It will call experts to its service. [illegible] secure the [illegible] fruits of the best study. If a question of [illegible] adjustment is pending, it will have the [illegible] and trained master handling it. If the [illegible] it will summon to its columns the astronomer who is supreme in his science and has the faculty of popularizing it. If the [illegible] problem is to be explored it will have its own [illegible] to sound its depths. If the [illegible] water supply is agitating a great city, it will have its own skilled engineer to conduct the investigation and point out the way of relief. These experts will be just as much a part of its organization as its war correspondents. This system will be expensive—more expensive, even, than the present lavish use of the telegraph—but the increasing resources and profits of the great papers will demand and justify it.

OLD-TIME JOURNALISM.

Thurlow Weed's autobiography contains the following chapter from his early experience as a journalist in Albany: There used to be a sharp rivalry between the Argus and Evening Journal to obtain the earliest news. The earliest copy of the president's annual message to congress was the occasion of much solicitude. Such messages were usually received about the close of navigation. On one of these occasions [illegible] went to New York to obtain the earliest possible copy of President Jackson's message. Mr. Obadiah Van Benthuysen, one of the proprietors of the Argus, went to New York on the same boat and on the same errand. Col. J. Watson Webb, one of the editors of the Courier and Enquirer, had been favored with a copy of the message in advance of its delivery to congress. No other New York paper had it. Col. Webb, then in political accord with the Argus, promised Mr. Van Benthuysen the first copy printed of the Courier, while I was to receive the second. The steamboat DeWitt Clinton, Capt. Sherman, by an arrangement which Mr. Van Benthuysen had made with the agent, was to delay her departure from 5 o'clock P. M. until Mr. Van Benthuysen came on board, should he be able to do so by 11 o'clock.

My friend, Capt. Sherman, advised me of this arrangement, adding that his orders were to have everything in readiness and cast off his lines the moment Mr. Van Benthuysen should get on board, expressing the hope that I might also get there before the boat was out of the dock. We passed the evening at the office of the Courier and Enquirer, with hacks waiting at the door. Toward 1 o'clock the first proof impression of the message was taken and handed to Mr. Van Benthuysen, who instantly made his exit. There was a delay of nearly two minutes before I obtained my copy. In descending three flights of stairs I found the lights extinguished and was compelled to grope my way down. In this way I lost another minute. In consequence of which I reached the wharf to find the steamer under way about twenty feet from the dock. I learned from an acquaintance who was standing on the dock that a freight steamer would leave early the next morning. Proceeding to the dock of that steamer, I induced the agent to fire up and get under way at as early an hour as practicable. We were off in two hours after the departure of the DeWitt Clinton, and reached Poughkeepsie, where both boats were detained by the ice an hour or two after Mr. Van Benthuysen had departed in the mail stage for Albany. I found "Bally," a well-known and active livery-stable man, who assured me that he could overtake the stage before it reached Albany. In a very few minutes, therefore, I was seated in a cutter (for the sleighing was good) and on my way to Albany. "Bally" was as good as his word, for on approaching Greenbush the stage was in sight, scarcely a quarter of a mile ahead of us. Mr. Van Benthuysen and myself ran a foot race across the river on the ice, and the Journal and the Argus issued the message in an extra simultaneously.

A CURIOUS STORY.

America Settled by the Welsh in the Year 1170.

In a lecture by James Wood of Albany, he related the following: Of one tradition which exists among the Welsh: In 1170 two brothers, named David and Madoc, quarreled for the throne. The younger, Madoc, becoming disgusted, gave up the struggle, and, fitting out a ship, sailed west. The next year he returned, said he had discovered a fruitful country, and called upon his friends to follow him. He had no difficulty in filling ten ships with men, women and children. They sailed away, and according to the Welsh story were never heard of again.

This would not be worth much as history were it not that it seems confirmed by evidence found upon this side of the ocean.

In 1670, 500 years after Prince Madoc left Wales, a Welsh minister named Morgan was sent from New York to North Carolina to preach to some Welsh people [illegible] there.

WELSH SPEAKING INDIANS.

[illegible] wandered too far beyond the outskirts [illegible] and was captured by the Indians, [illegible] many miles inland and prepared to [illegible] the stake. The faggots were piled [illegible] doom seemed sealed. Suddenly [illegible] in Welsh: "Have I come so far to die [illegible]" To his surprise the Indian chief [illegible] loosed his bonds and embraced him, [illegible] Welsh: "No, not if you speak that language." [illegible] he was the honored guest of the [illegible].

[illegible] deepened when the principal [illegible] Indian tribe gathered round him [illegible] conversed with him in Welsh. He [illegible] them and they understood him. But [illegible] was to discover that they [illegible] copy of the bible in the Welsh [illegible].

[illegible] this story in a letter sent to friends [illegible] letter is well authenticated, but it [illegible] we have in the matter. So far [illegible] nothing more was ever heard of [illegible] who spoke Welsh and had a Welsh [illegible].

[illegible] fifteen or twenty years later an explorer [illegible] returning from beyond the Mississippi [illegible] among other wonders, that they found [illegible] Indians who speak the Welsh language. [illegible] have a manuscript copy of the Welsh [illegible] of their number can read it, and they [illegible] mysterious treasure carefully rolled up [illegible] animals.

WHITE INDIANS FOUND.

[illegible] or twenty years later still another ex[illegible] brings us back strange news from the [illegible] of the North. They have found there [illegible] with whitened hair and blue eyes [illegible] speaks of a tribe of white Indians [illegible] the upper courses of the Missouri, [illegible] different from the tribes around them. [illegible] fair hair and blue eyes, and their language [illegible] strangely mixed with a great number of [illegible].

[illegible] Mr. Woods, "here we have five independent accounts which seem to tell one story. [illegible] strange that historians don't know what [illegible] them. But if Indians on the American [illegible] speak the Welsh language, they must [illegible] taught at some time; if there are manuscripts [illegible] of the Welsh bible here, they must [illegible] here somehow. And you can put these [illegible] as you please."

FRENCH FISHERMEN.

[illegible] curious fact was stated by the lecturer [illegible] of the discoveries by John Cabot, he [illegible] "Here is a strange thing. John [illegible] the shores of Newfoundland in 1497, [illegible] after Columbus set sail. He found [illegible] were in possession of a great number [illegible] words, and [illegible] understood him [illegible] in that language. They knew [illegible] for codfish and fishing. [illegible] learned that the [illegible] rock-bound coast of northern France [illegible] habit of coming to these black Americ[illegible] fishing smacks and catching the [illegible] these shores abounded. [illegible] five years after the time of Columbus. [illegible] Columbus.

ANOTHER RESPONSE FROM A RITUALIST.

PORTLAND, Aug. 15.

To the Editor of The Oregonian:

In "A Word from a Ritualist," I had no thought or desire of provoking controversy. My only object was to correct what I could but deem a misapprehension on your part, touching the nature and purpose of the ritualistic movement in the Episcopal church. The whole tenor of your editorial plainly indicated your belief that the acts of worship insisted upon were entirely heartless forms and exhibitions of showy ostentation, whose only object was to allure the young men and others into attendance upon the public church services. I trust that what I had to say upon that subject has not failed of its purposed effect in disabusing your mind and that of others, entertaining like views, of a very false estimate of a very earnest and honest movement, and one which has enlisted in its active propagation, bishops, priests and laymen of the church, who in piety, learning and influence are the peers of their fellows.

Serious objection has been taken by Rev. T. L. Sails, who, I am told, is a Methodist clergyman, to my views, and in your issue of the 15th instant he metaphorically takes his castor into the controversial ring and dares me to tread on the tail of his clerical coat. Go to. I never take a dare.

He solemnly reminds you that the church has duly certified the world, in one of its articles that nothing shall be deemed necessary for salvation, or made an article of faith, but what may be proved out of holy scriptures, and then triumphantly demands to have pointed out a chapter and verse for "altars, altar lights, genuflexions and crossings." Let me turn Yankee and ask my good clerical brother where he finds chapter and verse for that emotional monstrosity, potent the "mourner's bench"—a clerical invention and adjunct of the modern revival so-called, which has disgusted more level-headed, thoughtful men with the Christian religion than all the writings of all the infidels in the past century, Bob Ingersoll included. Imagine, if you can, the Savior of the world standing behind a "mourners" bench in my brother's meetinghouse and running a red-hot revival. Faugh! the gorge rises at the thought and I am sickened as I write. And how about the organ and the choir? Think you that St. Paul or either of the apostles ever heard of either? And how about the church building itself? In the days of Christ and his apostles there were no church buildings. And now does it follow that organs and choirs and churches are begotten of the devil and are to be tabooed? Assuredly, if there is any force in my reverend brother's argument.

But one would suppose that altars were wholly unknown to the apostles, if my reverend friend's views are correct. And yet did not St. Paul, when contrasting the Christian system with others, assert its superiority in the emphatic words: "We have an altar?" My friend does not agree with Paul, but I fail to see that he is any the worse for the saint. Now an altar connotes a sacrifice to be offered, and one whose function is to make the offering and if the sacrifice to be offered happens to be a divine one then it becomes worthy of all honor which can be manifested by piety and taste combined. Altar-lights and genuflexions cease to be empty formalisms and become befitting expressions of reverence and devotion. The intimation is broadly made that we regard them as essential to divine worship, if not, indeed to salvation. Now, in the name of all the heresiarchs, from Arius to Wesley inclusive, who ever taught that they were essential to either? What is claimed for them and other so-called ritualistic practices is that they are befitting, appropriate and most helpful aids to devotional frame of mind and acceptable service. They tend to beautify and make glorious the service of the Lord's house, and in so far as they do so, they are to be heartily approved, and not denounced. And just in so far forth as they are fit expressions of the faith, they crystalize and expand render it abiding, and doctrines can only be made permanent by embodiment in institutions and forms and rites. Strange it is that the Protestant world will persist in shutting its eyes to this priceless lesson, taught of all the ages. It will have none of altar, or sacrifice or priest, none of teaching ceremonial or ritual; and as the result, it is split up into a thousand jarring, warring sects; quarreling over dogmas and disputing about doctrines. The tumultuous sea, throwing up dirt and mire, is its fit emblem.

I am taken roundly to task for confessing that, humanly speaking, there is no reason in the Christian system, and this, too, notwithstanding St. Paul's distinct admission that "great is the mystery of Godliness." A mystery, also, which we are divinely certified that angels have striven to fathom, but in vain. My friend has no troubles upon the subject. The miraculous conception of the Savior by the overshadowing of the virgin by the Holy Ghost is as plain as a pikestaff. God manifest in the flesh offers no more difficulties to his reason than the truism that the whole is equal to all its parts; while the doctrine of the trinity is as simple as the multiplication table, and as easily "to be understood of the people." I am reminded that the lord has said: "Come now and let us reason together." Yes, but not about the mysteries of the faith. Such invitations are plainly limited to the matters of his righteful government over us, and our bounden duty to obey his commands. One would think that an intellect able to grasp the profound mysteries of the faith, would be able to see a distinction as palpable as this. But, nous verrons, you can't always tell—sometimes, These learned men are often unreliable, and don't see half as far into a millstone as they think they can.

My friend seems to think that if the people were fed in church with "bread" and not the stones of ritualistic mummery" that all would be well. Well, he and men like him have been cramming their "bread" down the throats of the people for about 300 years, and what is the result? Faith has almost died out of the hearts of men. Every Protestant sect in the land is thoroughly and hopelessly honey-combed with infidelity. The divine institution of the church is flatly denied. The sacraments, denied all operative efficacy, have become mere symbols and their administration a senseless mummery. Several conferences of my friend's own church have had the shameless audacity to forbid the use of wine in the administration of the blessed eucharist; and made the use of water in its stead, compulsory.

"Can such things overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder?"

I may not live to see the day when the church of my love will shake off her fears and rise up to the measure of her opportunities and her high duty; but whoso does will see her grandly triumphant over all her foes—while the thousand and one sects which now deny her divine authority will have died the death that knows no resurrection. And so mote it be.

THE NORTHERN ROUTE.

The San Francisco Journal of Commerce publishes the following sensible observations by a gentleman well known in the mercantile community:

Considerable speculation is now openly expressed respecting the probable effect upon business in this city and state by the opening up of the Northern Pacific railroad across the continent—a direct continental highway between New York and Oregon; or, in other words, the opening of direct communication between the eastern Atlantic states, Oregon and the great northwest, centering at the Columbia river and ports on Puget sound, W. T. Already a number of leading merchants have established branch houses in Portland and Astoria, and others will no doubt follow. The driving of the last spike is soon to be heralded, while Henry Villard and his associates are already arranging for a salmon train of cars to run direct from the Columbia river to New York. Doubtless many other special trains will run across the continent, not only with representatives of this but of other nations with whom we are closely allied, the object of which is to bring the road into greater prominence than it could possibly attain under other circumstances. There is no question but that a sharp competition is soon to be inaugurated by this Villard railroad as it is called, and it behooves the people of this state to look to their laurels, and to encourage those who have long been in the field, and who have accomplished so much in the development of California, and been the instruments of making this the banner wheat and wool state of the union. Some there are who are of the belief that California has reached the limit of her wheat production. Not by no means. There are yet millions of acres of virgin land that are still to be brought under successful cultivation as soon as more irrigation canals are completed, some of which are now well under headway. It is probable that we have realized the maximum of our wool and sheep growing, but not so with our wheat, wine grape, and other fruit interests. These are all being rapidly developed. Immigration is pouring in upon us, and small farms are now the order of the day. It is well to look this northern stranger fully in the face, and see that the trade and commerce of this port is not wasted or driven from us. The danger is great. Already we have lost heavily by allowing our ships to be driven from this port to Benicia, Port Costa, Vallejo and Oakland, when, by wiser and more conservative action, all this could have been prevented, and this important traffic carried on at our very doors—alongside our seawall, wharves and piers, instead of compelling ships to be towed up twenty or thirty miles inland to take in their outward bound cargoes of wheat.

TIME CONQUERED BY "REX MAGNUS"

The Humiston Food Preservative.

IT PRESERVES MEATS, FISH, OYSTERS, MILK, Cream, Eggs and other food products in all their freshness, purity and sweetness, in all seasons and climates.

A Trial Will Prove It.

This preparation is not to be classed with those failures which have preceded it. Scientific men like Prof Samuel W. Johnson, of Yale College, and others, have tested it thoroughly and give it their most hearty endorsement. At a slight expense you can satisfy yourself by actual trial that it will do all that is claimed for it.

How to Get It.

You do not have to buy a county right, nor a costly recipe. We sell neither the one nor the other. If druggists and grocers keep it, or we will send you a sample pound pre-paid (by mail or express, as we prefer) on receipt of price. Name your express office.

It is Safe, Pure, Tasteless, Harmless.

Rex Magnus is composed of simple and harmless antiseptics, and the directions for its use are so plain that a child can follow them. It does not in the slightest degree affect the taste or appearance of the food and it contains no injurious substances.

Within the Reach of All.

But a small quantity of the preservative is required for each pound of food. Meats, fish, butter, etc., can be saved at a cost not exceeding a cent a pound. "Viandine," for meats, poultry, etc. 50 cts. per lb. "Ocean Wave," for oysters, lobsters, etc., $1. "Pearl," for cream, $1. "Snow Flake," for milk, butter, etc., $1. "Queen," for eggs, $1. "Aqua-Vitæ," for fluid extracts, etc., $1. "Anti-Ferment," "Anti-Fly" and "Anti-Mold," 50 cents per each. Put up in 1-lb. and 5-lb. cans and in 25-lb boxes. Mention this paper.

THE HUMISTON FOOD PRESERVING CO.
72 Kilby St., Boston, Mass.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

DON'T BE SKEPTICAL. REASON TEACHES AND EXPERIENCE CONFIRMS THAT TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT IS AN INVALUABLE REMEDY FOR ANY AND ALL DISORDERS OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS. A TEASPOONFUL IN A GLASS OF WATER EVERY MORNING, BEFORE EATING, IS NOT ONLY EXTREMELY BENEFICIAL, BUT A PROTECTION AGAINST DISEASE WHICH NO ONE CAN AFFORD TO DISREGARD. FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS

[illegible]

I have known and watched the use of Swift's Specific for over 50 years, and have never known or heard of a failure to cure Blood Poison when properly taken. I used it on my servants from 1850 to 1865, as did also a number of my neighbors, and in every case that came within my knowledge it effected a cure. In all my life I have never known a remedy that would so fully accomplish what it is recommended to do.

H. L. DENNARD Perry Ga.

I have known and used Swift's Specific for more than twenty years, and have seen more wonderful results from its use than from any remedy in or out of the pharmacopœia. It is a certain and safe antidote to all sorts of Blood Poison.

J. DICKSON SMITH, M. D.,
Atlanta, Ga.

The Great Drug House of Chicago.

"We do not hesitate to say that for a year past we have sold more of Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) than all other Blood Purifiers combined, and with most astonishing results. One gentleman who used half a dozen bottles says that it has done him more good than treatment that cost him $1000. Another who has used it for a scrofulous affection reports a permanent cure from its use.

VAN SCHAACK, STEVENSON & CO.

$1,000 REWARD!

Will be paid to any chemist who will find, on analysis of one hundred bottles S. S. S. one particle of Mercury, Iodide Potassium, or any mineral substance.
